RACE WITH FATE.

Edward M. Field Falls in an Unequal Task.

Stole Everything He Could Get His Hands On.

Robbed the Church in His Mad Career.

Defalcation, Forgery and Other Crimes Charged.

The Whole of Cyrus W. Field's Fortune Would Not Pay the Debts of the Son Who Has Been Taken to an Asylum with a Badly Shattered Mind.

New York, Nov. 30.—The World this morning says that Edward M. Field, son of Cyrus W. Field, the senior member of the firm of Field, Lindley, Weichers & Co., which failed last week, was taken to the Bloomingdale insane asylum on Saturday. He leaves behind him disaster, confusion, the wreck of a business firm ruined by his misdoings and a blot on the escutcheon of an illustrious family.

The Facts Are Black.

The innuendoes and accusations of Wall street are justified. The worst suspicions are mild compared with the black facts. Edward M. Field not only re-hypothecated railroad bonds placed with him as collateral, but he appropriated large sums of money. He raised loans on worthless securities, deceived his partners and betrayed their implicit faith in him. The desperation which followed his wild speculations and methods of conducting his affairs seems to have divested Field of the last shred of honor. In his efforts to make the crooked straight, he did not spare anyone who reposed confidence in him. Two thousand dollars in pew rents, turned over to him as trustee of the Tarrytown Presbyterian church, is missing. He was treasurer of the association which owns the Washington building, collected $35,000 in rents and sunk the money in his struggle to avert impending doom. Field ran a long race with the fates. It is no wonder that his intellect could not stand the strain.

Millions Cannot Save Him.

A family conference was held Saturday and yesterday at the home of Cyrus W. Field. Those who took part in it were Cyrus W. Field, his brothers, David Dudley Field and Stephen J. Field; George De Forest Lord, Cyrus W. Field's counsel, and a representative of Drexel, Morgan & Co. The conference was held to decide what course should be taken by Cyrus W. Field regarding Edward M. Field.

The situation was found to be this: Edward M. Field's liabilities, arising from the peculiar conduct of his business, which is such as to give rise to intimations of defalcations and forgery, amount to millions.

To satisfy the claims of his creditors would require Cyrus W. Field's entire fortune and considerably more.

The question which the conference had to decide was whether Cyrus W. Field should sacrifice his entire fortune for this purpose. The family honor was at stake. Family pride shrank from the prospect of the public disgrace of a Field.

It was urged that an untarnished name should be saved from blemish. The breath of scandal had already touched Edward M. Field's fair name. Could not all this be stopped and the last of a fortune once great be pledged for sweet honor's sake?

A Blot on a Fair Name.

When the desperate situation had been fully discussed and viewed from all sides, it was finally decided, in view of the fact that even if Cyrus W. Field should sacrifice his entire fortune he would not be able to meet the liabilities of his son, that he should not make the sacrifice.

An Awful Tangle.

From the facts ascertained yesterday by the World it is evident that the failure of Field, Lindley, Weichers & Co. is one of the biggest financial scandals, tangles, and muddles in the history of Wall street.

It is considered to be a parallel case to the famous Ives-Stayner failure. There are many plain evidences of fraud.

So plain are they that only his illness saved Edward M. Field from arrest. A warrant, it is said, has been issued and Inspector Byrnes has had men watching the house, No. 125 East Twenty-first street.

Big Wild-Cat Deals.

The World makes public a number of transactions of the failed firm which show the magnitude of their questionable dealings. Some of these transactions are of recent occurrence and go to show that the mind of Edward M. Field must have been very clear at that time.

The failure of Field & Co. is directly due to the delay in the arrival of an ocean steamer. A big private deal, involving a consolidation into one big corporation of all the large sugar plantations in Cuba, would have gone through if the vessel, which bore the agent of the Cuban planters, had arrived on time.

Nearly $1,000,000 of the securities had been subscribed for and this would have given the firm plenty of money to get along on for some time.

The amount the Cuban planters would have realized is a matter of speculation, considering the way Field & Co. handled all their other transactions.

Everybody Paid Tribute.

S. V. White and Woerishoeffer & Co. were hoodwinked by Field to the extent of $100,000 in the corn deal, fraught with such disaster to Mr. White. The three firms were interested in the deal, and Field had the brokers who handled the business for the pool turn over to him all the proceeds of the cash corn sold. White never got any of this money and Woerishoeffer but little.

Another instance of the methods of Field is the case of Peter Cassidy, a well-known stock speculator. He purchased of the firm 1,500 shares of North American stock, for which he paid them $30,000 in cash.

Cassidy did not take up his stock, but left it with the firm. They forthwith peddled it out and realized $30,000, which they used for their own ends.

Deceived His Partners.

The World's information as to the manner in which the firm carried on their business was obtained from interviews with a clerk of the late firm, and from talks with Assignee Gould.

The firm was constantly short of funds. All the ready cash was used by Field in his various enterprises. Certain transactions show that his partners, Weichers and Lindley, were perfectly honest in all their dealings, and had no idea of the financial abberations of E. M. Field.

On the 1st of August several friends of Mr. Weichers deposited with the firm of Field & Co. amounts aggregating half a million dollars. The money was to remain at interest just as if it was a savings bank.

By the 1st of October the last dollar of it was gone, gobbled up by various wild-cat dealings. One of Mr. Weichers' friends who had deposited $118,000 wished to withdraw his account soon after it was deposited. He was in Europe then and cabled to Mr. Weichers for the money.

This cable was intercepted, as were several other cables and letters making the same demand. Finally Weichers accidentally got hold of a cable asking for the money, and at once sat down and mailed the man a sight draft for $118,000 on a German banking house.

After sending the draft Weichers informed Field what he had done, and then there was a scramble. It was necessary to keep up appearances at any cost, so the brokerage firm of Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne were told to take care of this account. They notified the German bank to honor the draft.

But Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne had to have satisfactory collateral in this transaction, and they wanted it in cash.

Cyrus Took a Hand.

At this critical juncture Edward M. Field threw himself on his father's mercy, and the latter gave him $125,000. It is plain from Mr. Weichers' action in promptly sending his friend a draft for the full amount of his deposit as soon as it was asked of him that he had no dishonest intentions.

Union Pacific Deals.

Regarding the transactions between the Union Pacific people and the firm, the latter loaned the Union Pacific $900,000 originally, taking as collateral bonds worth at par $1,600,000. These bonds today are worth about $1,100,000. The Union Pacific people have taken up so far $200,000 of this loan, and to-day owe the firm some $700,000. The bonds are scattered everywhere, having been re-hypothecated by the firm in lots to suit their convenience. The amount thus disposed of aggregates $500,000. By this method the firm made an average gain of 20 per cent.

The more the affairs of Field, Lindley, Weichers & Co. are investigated the more widespread seems to be the injury resulting from the failure. It is now well known that several banks and a good many individuals will suffer to a greater or less extent by reason of their holding securities hypothecated by Field & Co. which are almost worthless.

Cyrus W. Field's Condition.

The condition of Cyrus W. Field last night, according to his physician, showed no material change. The doctor said his patient required absolute rest and quiet.

Another affliction has come to the aged financier. His daughter, Mary Grace, wife of Daniel A. Lindley, a partner in the firm of Field, Lindley, Weichers & Co., is very ill of cancer of the stomach, and the physicians say she cannot live two months.

HIS FACE HIS MISFORTUNE

Robert Mantell Too Gay to Suit His Wife.

She Has Filed Documents for a Legal Separation.

She Will Not Allow Him an Absolute Divorce for Reasons That Will Be Set Forth in the Petition at Length.

New York, Nov. 30.—Mrs. R. B. Mantell has engaged How & Hummel to procure a legal separation for her from the handsome and popular young actor whose name she bears. Divorce proceedings are not contemplated. Mrs. Mantell does not wish her husband to marry again, as he might, if set free from the matrionial bonds, which, if report be true, have been chafling him for some years. She wants a separation which will allow her the custody of the children and a suitable provision for their maintenance and her own.

Mrs. Mantell is known on the stage as Marie Sheldon. She has for years acted in her husband's company, and has traveled with him incessantly. She has three children, and cares for nothing in the world out side of her handsome husband and the babies. Mr. Mantell has been spoiled, his friends say, by the adoration of silly women. He has received so many love letters and has been tempted so often off the stage that his head has been turned, they say. Every one who knows Mr. Mantell speaks of his "good heart" and "generosity," and next of his "weakness."

He was devoted to his wife and children until about five years ago. Since then there has been several outbreaks of jealousy on the part of his wife, directed usually against actresses in Mr. Mantell's company. The crisis, often averted, came at last.

She telegraphed a request from Cincinnati last week to the lawyers asking them to institute proceedings against Mr. Mantell. Immediately on receipt of their reply she came to New York and placed in Mr. Hummel's hands enough evidence to warrant an instant beginning of legal proceedings.

The story of Robert Bruce Mantell's courtship, marriage and subsequent development into one of the most successful star actors in America is quite as sentimentally romantic as the theme of the dramas in which he is most popular.

Being of Scotch parentage, his wanderings in search of a living naturally led him to the land of pease, brose and haggis. In spite of the meagreness of his finances the theater fascinated him. While in the gallery of the Greenock playhouse one night he watched the performance, in a small character, of a brown-eyed, black-haired little actress, who was put down on the bills as Miss Marie Sheldon.

In accordance with the general romance of his career, Robert Mantell fell in love at first sight. He found out that the actress Marie Sheldon was in private life Miss Marie Shand, a young woman of examplary life and respectable family in Greenock. He gained an introduction, proposed marriage, was accepted and got married within a period almost as brief as it takes for such sentimental matters to transpire on the stage.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Mantell, to pursue the simile further, had a honeymoon quite as vicissitous as that commonly experienced by the good young man and hapless heroine of modern melodrama. A child came to them, but engagements did not. The first few years of their married life brought many hardships and extraordinary shifts to make ends meet, but the young couple were very much in love with each other, and they put on a braver face than habilaments or circumstances would warrant.

Mrs. Mantell secured employment occasionally in the Scotch theaters, and her husband, who had gained many points in the practical methods of the stage from his more experienced wife, was persistent in seeking an engagement as a professional actor. He was finally successful in securing a small part in an English company.

His handsome face and fine figure, as well as his evident ability, attracted the attention of Miss Wallis who engaged him for her company. The advancement he made was so rapid that within a few years he was leading man of the Wallis organization. After several successful seasons, touring through England, Robert Mantell quitted Miss Wallis and came with his wife and child to this country.

FOSTORIA TID-BITS.

Odd Fellows Election—Toughs Bound Over—Thanksgiving Mention—General.

Fostoria, O., Nov. 30.—(Special)—Miss Abbott, pincipal of the High school of this city, will read a paper on "Ethics in the School Room," at the N. W. O. Teachers' association to be held at Kenton on December 28. Miss Jones will occupy one of the convention's evenings by holding a "Primary Teachers' conference."

Forty-two of the poor families were remembered in a Thanksgiving donation made Thursday by the public school children throughout the city. Altogether they distributed 35 bushels of potatoes, five bushels of apples, a barrel of turnips, 50 baskets of miscellaneous groceries, besides considerable money and clothing.

Fred Franklin and W. Cozad, the two toughs who robbed a drunken glass blower Saturday night, have been bound over to court and were taken to the county jail, not being able to furnish $250 bail each.

Fostoria encampment, No. 241, I. O. O. F., has elected officers for the coming year as follows: C. P., I. M. Dicken; H. P., P. M. Beauchamp; S. W., O. B. England; J. W., S. S. Padgham; scribe, J. T. Ewing; treasurer, C. O. Yant. Installation, second Wednesday in January, 1892.

DISMISSED IN DISGRACE.

British Officers Lose Their Shoulder Straps

As a Result of the Manipur Investigation.

Boileau and Butcher Should Have Remained and Fought Rather Than Made Their Escape with Mrs. Grimwood.

London, Nov. 30.—The names of Captains Boileau and Butcher have been removed from the list of officers in the British army as the result of a long inquiry into their action at the time of the massacre at Manipur, on March 28 last, When Chief Commissioner James W. Quinton, Agent F. St. C. Grimwood, Col. Skene, in command of the commissioner's goorkha escort, and a number of British officers, together with nearly 500 native soldiers in the British service, were killed.

Chief Commissioner Quinton, it will be remembered, had been investigating some serious troubles which had occurred among the chiefs at Manipur, and was holding a durbar, or conference with the view, it was afterwards shown, of arresting the most turbulent, those who had proriously deposed the rajah of Manipur.

The Manipuri chiefs, however, got wind of the commissioner's intentions, and suddenly the British residency and the goorkha camp were fiercely attacked by the Manipuris, who killed 470 of the goorkha escort in addition to a number of British officers and civilian officials.

It was upon this occasion that Mrs. Grimwood, the wife of Political Agent Grimwood, escaped in company with Captains (then Lieutenants) Boileau and Butcher and others from the general massacre, and made her way, after enduring terrible hardships, to Lakhipur.

The investigation shows that Captains Boileau and Butcher failed to do their duty after Col. Skene was killed, it being inferred from the brief statement just issued from the horse guards, that the disgraced officers might have rallied the goorkhas and have turned the tide of battle against the rebellious natives.

GREAT DAY FOR CATHOLICS,

Golden Jubilee of Archbishop Kenrick.

People of All Creeds Honor the Man Who Has Won Fame in the World by Devotion to Religious Principles.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 30.—Of all the days in the calendar year Sunday was the day of days for the Roman Catholics of the United States.

From the Atlantic to the Pacific, and from the lakes to the gulf, dignitaries and laymen of the Catholic church in America came to celebrate the achievements of a great man's life. Sunday began the celebration of the golden jubilee of Peter Richard Kenrick, bishop of the arch diocese of St. Louis for the past fifty years.

Solemn services of thanksgiving were held in all the Catholic churches of this city.

The celebration which began Sunday morning will be in keeping with the noble character of the venerable prelate. No event in the Catholic church in America has brought together as many distinguished dignitaries. All the church ecclesiastics will be present, and his holiness, the pope, has sent a representative with a gift.

In St. Louis the interest has not been confined to Roman Catholics, many prominent citizens of all creeds having given much of their time and means to aid in making the occasion one of the grandest of its nature ever witnessed.

The Christian Brothers gave an entertainment in honor of the Most Rev. Archbishop Kenrick at their college. Various prelates and churchmen were present.

Archbishop Ireland's lecture at Music hall was a prominent feature of the festivities. The distinguished prelate is one of the most forcible speakers in the Catholic church. All sorts and conditions of men were anxious to see and hear this prince of the church, whose name has become a by-word in American public life, and therefore the hall was crowded.

He is known to the politician by reason of the vast influence he wields; to the Grand Army through the ties of loyalty and comradeship; to the temperance man by his unflinching stand for the principle of total abstinance; but above all he is known to the workingmen, to whose cause he has devoted much of the energy of his mind and the eloquence of his tongue.

Early this morning Archbishop Kenrick said mass privately in the chapel of his residence on Lindell avenue, and at 8:30 he entered a carriage drawn by iron gray horses, covered with purple trappings and led by a footman. His eminence, Cardinal Gibbons, had a similar equippage, drawn by black horses, covered with red drapery. Both carriages and their distinguished occupants were escorted by a mounted platoon of Catholic gentlemen wearing appropriate sashes and badges.

The procession moved slowly in the clear and crisp morning air, from the residence to the school house adjoining the cathedral, a distance of nearly two miles, and reached the end of the journey shortly before 9 o'clock. The most reverend and right reverend prelates and the officers of the mass donned their vestments and shortly after 9 o'clock the procession to the main entrance to the church began.

The officers of the mass were: Very Rev. H. Muehlsiepen, V. G., and Rev. William Walsh, deacons of honor to the most reverend archbishop; Very Rev. Philip P. Brady, arch-priest to his eminence Cardinal Gibbons; Reverends D. W. Kenrick and J. Hessoun, deacons of the mass; Rev. E. J. Shea, sub-deacon of the mass; Rev. Wm. Noonan, cross-bearer, and Rev. Martin S. Brennan, first master of ceremonies.

CALL'S SEAT.

Davidson is on Deck and Will Make Some Trouble.

Washington, Nov. 30.—H. R. M. Davidson has arrived from Florida to contest Senator Call's seat. He said to-day: "I was appointed by Gov. Fleming without solicitation on my part, and believe there was no election by the legislature last winter, because a quorum of the Florida senate was not present in the joint session of the legislature that gave Mr. Call a majority of votes.

It is true some decisions of the United States senate are in Mr. Call's favor, but they have been decisions in which contestants have been of opposite parties, and the decisions have been according to partisan bias.

This is the first instance in which contestants have belonged to the same party, and it gives the senate an opportunity to decide the question on constitutional as distinguished from partisan grounds.

Col. Davidson was a member of the seven congresses immediately preceding the one about to assemble.

CAN GLENSON EXPLAIN?

The Peoples' United Legion Are Hunting Up Some Missing Funds.

Boston, Nov. 30.—The secretary of the Peoples' United Legion, S. Glenson, of New York, left this city on November 9 with $18,000 of the funds of the order, ostensibly to deposit in the Fourteenth Street National bank, New York.

On the 13th a letter was received from him saying he was detained by business connected with the Maturity Loan association, another order he was organizing.

Nothing has since been heard of him and the officers of the United Peoples' Legion have received information from the Fourteenth street bank stating that there is only $5 placed to their credit. The order itself is now bankrupt.

VALUABLE ORE FIND.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Nov. 30.—An ore body struck on the 1,500 foot level of the Ontario a few days ago, which it was found averaged 18 inches wide, has been constantly broadening until now it extends the whole width of the drift. It is also of better grade and richer than ever before encountered.

MAY STRIKE TIFFIN.

Tiffin, O., Nov. 30.—(Special)—There is much interest manifested here since the announcement of the failure of Field, Lindley & Co. of New York, as to its effect on the management of the Tiffin Street Railway company. Lindley is president of the company and Field is a large stockholder.

"LAND BILL" ALLEN DEAD.

Columbus, O., Nov. 30.—The eccentric individual known as "Land Bill" Allen died Sunday at the Franklin county infirmary. He was the originator of the idea of the nation and state land laws. His real name was George Washington Allen, and his age about 79.

PIONEER DEAD.

Tiffin, O., Nov. 30.—(Special)—John Myers, a pioneer resident of Huron and Seneca counties, died in this city at 9 o'clock yesterday morning in his 76th year. He was born in Germany and reared a family of nine children.

COLD WAVE IN WASHINGTON.

It Is Chasing Up and Down Benjamin's Back Bone.

Mr. Blaine Has Had Himself Examined and Pronounced a Well Man—Just Watch His Smoke.

Philadelphia, Nov. 30.—The Press publishes the following to-day:

To consult the medical examiner was the prime reason for Mr. Blaine's trip to Philadelphia. Mr. Blaine learned that he was in better health and strength now than he was four years ago, and that six months and a year hence he would be stronger than he is now. He learned further that he is as good a man physically at 61 years Mr Blaine's age, as anybody else of like age.

"Mr. Blaine is a well man." This is what Dr. Madison Taylor, the physician to the secretary said yesterday in an interview. Dr. Taylor thoroughly examined Mr. Blaine during the latter's visit to this city and he has been asked to make this statement to put a stop to the many reports to the contrary. "Mr. Blaine is in better condition, a great deal better condition, than six months or a year ago," added Dr. Taylor, "and so far as I can definitely say from a medical standpoint and what has been told me of what it was before I began to attend him, Mr. Blaine enjoys better health than he did three or four years ago. Six months hence he will be even better than he is now.

"Mr. Blaine's health is excellent. He is back to his normal weight. He has a good appetite and sleeps well. Mr. Blaine has got well by the exercise of common sense, not medicines. At Bar Harbor he went out riding so far per day, walked a certain distance and played hand ball a fixed length of time. In short, he conscientiously observed my advice in the matter of exercise and now we are both very much gratified. Before his illness Mr. Blaine was not a man who would take much exercise. Now he is the opposite. He has grown to like it. Mr. Blaine wrote me a couple of weeks before his visit here that he walked about two miles every day. Very often he says he walks a mile at a stretch. If Mr. Blaine continues to take care of himself as he is now doing I see no reason why he should not live many years longer. He has entered upon the ripe age, being 61 years old, and he takes pleasure in his present strength. It is very gratifying to state that his limbs and his arms are more muscular and larger than they have been for years."

VERY HEAVY WEATHER.

Captain of the Schooner Rivers Swept Overboard and Drowned.

London, Nov. 30.—The American schooner D. H. Rivers, belonging to Thomaston, Me., reached Queenstown today after a long and stormy passage.

During the heavy weather, which she encountered, the Rivers had her decks swept a number of times and otherwise suffered severely. A particularly heavy sea swept her captain overboard and he was drowned in spite of the efforts made to save his life. During a portion of this stormy voyage the schooner's crew were placed upon the shortest possible allowance of food and water, and when they reached Queenstown the men were in a sad plight.

KILLED HIS SISTER.

A Distressing Accident Reported from Tiffin.

A Nineteen-Year-Old Boy Fatally Wounds His Married Sister While Explaining a Gun to Her.

Tiffin, O., Nov. 30.—(Special)—Mrs. Christiana Olds died this morning near Bloomville as the result of the accidental discharge of a shotgun in the hands of her 19-year-old brother, Frank Geiger.

She had asked him to explain the workings of the firearm, and in closing the chamber the cartridge exploded, the load taking effect in her left side.

Her age was 23 and she was a bride of only two months.

Her brother and husband are almost frantic with grief.

ARE MARCHING ON PEKIN.

China's Rebellion Grows at an Alarming Rate.

Fierce Battle with Seven Hundred Imperials Killed.

The Emperor's Army Seeks Safety in Flight, While Its Adversaries Are Gaining Strength in Their Onward March of Destruction.

Shanghai, Nov. 30.—It is reported that a force of rebels under the direction of the Llama (priest) had a battle with the Imperial troops Tuesday near Ching-King, in Manchuria.

The Imperialists, who numbered 4,000 men, were defeated with the loss of 700 killed and many wounded.

The rest of the Imperial army took to flight.

The victorious rebels are now marching upon Pekin, about 380 miles distant. The rebel army is growing rapidly, as it is receiving accessions from all sides.

The intelligence that the rebels are marching to attack Pekin has caused the greatest excitement in that city.

Advices from Nankin tell of the reception of a famous rebel and Kolao leader, Chen Kin Lung, who, with three other prisoners, started for Nanking in the gunboat Teng Yin Chow.

A message was sent by wire to inform the Viceroy of the terrible Kolao's departure, so that suitable preparations might be made to receive him on landing.

If any high functionary had been making a visit to the southern metropolis no greater bustle would have been observable among the Provincial authorities. The city commandant paraded and got his troops ready, while the head magistrate brought several strong cages to the jetty.

At last the steamer came in sight, but night was approaching, and the authorities recognized that if the notorious rebel were landed then there would be great danger of an attempt being made to rescue him during the darkness. So it was determined to wait until daylight before he was brought ashore.

Early in the morning, therefore, guns were fired, and as far as the eye could reach long lines of soldiers were to be seen, with loaded firearms, drawn up in battle array.

The moment Chen stepped ashore a guard of 200 soldiers surrounded him and marched him off to the viceregal yomen. That authority waited upon the prisoner in the high court, and was accompanied by the provincial treasurer, several Taotais (mandrins) and the prefect of Nanking, two other magistrates and a number of generals, guards, soldiers, runners, detectives and executioners. In fact, every available foot of the immense yard and building was crowded.

Chen gave an entirely different version of his confession from that given before the Shanghai court, but he acknowledged that he had committed three murders. Then the provincial treasurer said:

"According to the law of murder it is life for life. You have committed three murders, and if you forfeit your life now it cannot be considered unjust, even in your own mind."

Two magistrates were then ordered to summon the executioner, who dragged Chen Kin Lung to the western gate at the entrance of the viceroy's yam, and sent him to the other world with neatness and despatch and with one blow of a sharp sword.

ELECTIONS IN ENGLAND.

Liberals Continue to Gain at the Polls.

A Review of the Results of Recent Ballots Which Will Prove Interesting to Students on This Side.

London, Nov. 30.—The election for a member of parliament to represent East Dorset, to succeed the late Mr. C. H. Bond, conservative, has resulted in a unionist victory. The vote was as follows:

The Hon. Humphrey Surt (unionist) 4,421, the Hon. Pascoe C. Glyn (Gladstone liberal) 4,070; unionist majority 351.

At the last election Mr. Bond, conservative, received 4,317 votes to 3,662 votes received by the Hon. P. C. Glyn, home-ruler.

There are about 9,800 registered voters in the division.

East Dorset went liberal in 1885 by a majority of 697 and tory in the following year by a majority of 655.

The liberals, it may be added, have been very successful in recent bye-elections in constituencies in which changes occurred at the last general election. On that occasion the liberals lost 79 seats. Of these, apart form East Dorset, eight have since been recovered, and the liberals have received six—North St. Pancras, North Bucks, Carnarvon district, Northwich, Loughborough and Stowmarket. In the seventh, South Dorset, the liberals were beaten by only forty votes.

In addition, three of the seats which the liberals gained at the general election have since become vacant, and the liberals have retained them all, namely, the exchange division of Liverpool, Leith, Elgin and Nairn.

Finally it will be recalled, at South Molton on Nov. 14, the liberals won another victory, the Gladstonian candidate, Mr. Lambert, being returned by a majority of 1,212 over the "dissentient liberal" (unionist) candidate, Mr. Buller, the result of the polling being 4,222 votes for Mr. Lambert and 3,010 for Mr. Buller. At the previous election at South Molton, Lord Lymington (recently elevated to the peerage on the death of his father, Lord Portsmouth) received 4,041 votes to 2,352 received by Mr. W. H. Walker, a home-ruler.

The Hon. Pascoe C. Glyn, the defeated Gladstonian candidate for East Dorset, is the gentleman who successfully contested that seat in 1885, but who was defeated the next year by Mr. Bond, the conservative.

ABDUCTOR ARRESTED.

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 30.—The mysterious King, who it is said returned the kidnaped Beals child, has been arrested.

MY AUNT'S SPARE BEDROOM.

My Aunt Euphemia's spare bedroom—
At Billington Center—has naught of cheer;
Has much of lugubriousness and gloom.
High is the corn-husk bed and hilly—
A thing for endurance, for discipline—
And the patchwork quilt has colors drear,
And the bolster is hard, and the pillows are thin,
And mmid the sheets and chilly.

In oval, funeral frames of black
Are the obsolete pictures of dead-and-gone
Distant relatives—hypochondriac,
Unpleasant persons, from their faces;
There is green rep furniture, glued to the wall;
And a wax wreath, fly-bespecked and wan,
And a worsted-worked motto biblical,
And asparagus in the vases.

The windows are closed, and the blinds belike,
In the spare bedroom; and a ghostly breath
And a dark and unearthly odor strike
A quake to the marrow of them that enter;
And subtle suggestions of the tomb—
Of dark afflictions—of grief—of death—
Lurk in the cherished, the spare bedroom
Of my aunt at Billington Center.

DEATH AND BURIAL.

Old-Time New England Superstitions Recalled.

Since the days when the Mathers governed New England opinions, and peopled the sky with witches and the graveyards with avenging spectres, and had attributed most nervous diseases to obsession, many curious customs in regard to death and burial had prevailed in the superstitious towns. In the old colonial houses on the capes, the wood-tick was held to be a death-watch; and on the decease of a member of the family in rural neighborhoods, the nearest relative went and told the bees, and sometimes trimmed the straw hives under the quince or peach or apple trees with crape. It was a touching sight to see an aged woman go out into the green yard and knock on the hives, and give the final word to the golden inhabitants of the air and flowers.

The bees in those domestic times, like the cat and dog, were a part of the family, and were supposed to possess occult knowledge, and so to these mysterious botanists were taken the family bereavements. The dog howled when death was approaching; the cat saw spirits, and started up and ran; and any unusual occurrence fell under the suspicion of being a death-fetch.

Most curious of the old-time superstitions was the custom of requiring lovers to watch the corpse. It associated the hopes of marriage with the silent vigil, was poetic, and has only disappeared from the oldest towns within a generation. No obligation of the social conscience was more scrupulously regarded than that a dead body should ever be left alone at night.

In the earliest days the solemn watchers were old men and women, deacons, select-men; but as the colonies grew, honest lovers with plighted troths were frequently selected for these long vigils. Awful were the stories that used to be told in the old inns and ordinaries of lovers who were disturbed amid such depressing duties by cats, owls, mysterious noises, and spectral visions.—Harper's Magazine.

INDIANS ARE DOOMED.

The Race Is Said to be Dying Out in the Northwest.

Chief Lot, of the Lower Spokanes, says the Portland Oregonian, gives the following causes of the decline of his race: "Our people are accustomed to a diet of fish, game and herbs, with plenty of exercise, and the change of our present diet has been detrimental to the health of our young men. The majority are now attacked with pulmonary consumption and the race is gradually dying out. I believe that if schools were established in our country, where physiological and sanitary laws could be taught, an improvement in the physical condition of the Indians would result. The young men have attended the Chemawa school, but the change from the mountainous to the low land has been fatal to them. We want schools in our own territory, and both the loyalty and the health of the Indians would be increased.

"It is sad," continued the chief, speaking impressively and emphasizing his words with emphatic gestures, "to look upon the apparently healthy men standing around me, and then to think of my people declining in health and strength and dying prematurely. I account for this by the fact that these men are educated, and their knowledge of physiological laws enables them to prolong life, while illness of our people means death. The Indians who choose agricultural pursuits as a mode of living are doing well and will improve when they understand it thoroughly. I am a farmer, as is the majority of my tribe. The farmer's physical condition is very good. The appliances for catching salmon in the Columbia are so effective that we seldom see any in the Spokane River, and fishing has nearly died out."

A TYPICAL BORDER SHERIFF.

There was only one policeman to enforce the law in a territory the size of Rhode Island. He was quite as remarkable in his way as any other development of that embryotic civilization. His name was Jack Kirkup, and all who knew him spoke of him as being physically the most superb example of manhood in the Dominion. Six feet and three inches in height, with the chest, neck and limbs of a giant, his three hundred pounds of weight were so exactly his complement as to give him the symmetry of an Apollo. He was good-looking, with the beauty of a round-faced, good-natured boy, and his thick hair fell in a cluster of ringlets over his forehead and upon his neck. No knight of Arthur's circle can have been more picturesque a figure in the forest than this "Jack." He was as neat as a dandy. He wore high boots and corduroy knickerbockers, a flannel shirt and a sack-coat, and rode his big bay horse with the ease and grace of a Skobeleff. He smoked like a fire of green brush, but had never tasted liquor in his life.

In a dozen years he had slept more frequently in the open air, upon pebble beds or in trenches in the snow, than upon ordinary bedding, and he exhibited, in his graceful movements, his sparkling eyes and ruddy cheeks, his massive frame and his imperturbable good nature, a degree of health and vigor that would seem insolent to the average New-Yorker.

Now that the railroad was building, he kept ever on the trail, along what was called "the right of way"—going from camp to camp to "jump" whiskey peddlers and gamblers and to quell disorder—except on pay-day, once a month, when he staid at Sprout's Landing.

The echoes of his fearless behavior and lively adventures rang in every gathering. The general tenor of the stories was to the effect that he usually gave one warning to evil-doers, and if they did not heed that he "cleaned them out." He carried a revolver, but never had used it. Even when the most notorious gambler on our border had crossed over into "Jack's" bailiwick the policeman depended upon his fists.

He had met the gambler and had "advised" him to take the cars next day. The gambler, in reply, had suggested that both would get along more quietly if each minded his own affairs, whereupon Kirkup had said: "You hear me: take the cars out of here to-morrow." The little community fit was Donald, B. C., a very rough place at the time) held its breathing for twenty-four hours, and at the approach of train-time was on tip-toe with strained anxiety.

At twenty minutes before the hour the policeman, amiable and easy-going as ever in appearance, began a tour of the houses. It was in a tavern that he found the gambler.

"You must take the train," said he.

"You can't make me," replied the gambler.

There were no more words. In two minutes the giant was carrying the limp body of the ruffian to a wagon, in which he drove him to jail. There he washed the blood off the gambler's face and tidied his collar and scarf. From there the couple walked to the cars, where they parted amicably.

"I had to be a little rough," said Kirkup to the loungers at the station, "because he was armed like a pin-cushion, and I didn't want to have to kill him."—Harper's.

The horseshoe superstition still sticks, and junk dealers find it profitable to keep horseshoes in stock for sale to dwellers in the tenement-house region, where a horseshoe over the door is still not uncommon. If all the money drawers of small shops could be rummaged, enough horseshoes could be found to supply half the equines in town.

A man may succeed without a correct knowledge of arithmetic or grammar, but without morality all else will fail.

VEGETARIAN ON PRINCIPLE.

Better to Live Unto Death Than Never to Live at All.

Yesterday Shagpat, who delights in paradoxes, and eats two pounds or so of rare beefsteak daily, met Shibly on the common. Shibly is a serious Bostonian, always somewhat in trouble about his soul. The following more or less Socratic conversation was overheard:

"You're getting thin, Shibly."

"I have taken to vegetarianism lately."

"Good heavens! A matter of principle?"

"Well, not altogether. Partly on aesthetic grounds. Meat is so gross, you know."

"Also you commiserate cattle and sheep more than Shibleian body?"

"Yes—one revolts at the thought that he is being fed by the cruelty to animals."

"Cruelty to animals! Don't you think you are illogical?"

"Certainly not! How could that be?"

"Let us look into the thing. You do not wish the animals to be deprived of life for your sake, eh?"

"Precisely."

"But to shut a creature out from living is surely as bad as to deprive it of life."

"Perhaps worse."

"Now, if all were vegetarians, few cattle or sheep would be bred."

"Obviously."

"Which is to say that general vegetarianism would shut out from the joys of existence multitudes of animals that would attain to those joys if we all continued to eat meat."

"That's a way of looking at it."

"Surely the humane way. Take your own case. You've eaten, say, a cow and three sheep the last two years. By your vegetarianism you will limit the demand for 20 animals the next 10 years. You may be said to kill them unborn. Aren't you going to be guilty of cruelty to animals?"

"Unborn animals don't suffer pain."

"No more do dead animals."

"But they have suffered the pain of death."

"But death is only the period at the end of the sentence of life. Don't you agree that it is better to live unto death than never to have lived at all?"

"It's an assumption."

"An assumption! To discredit it is tantamount to condemning the Deity for creating living things. And if you don't discredit it, your vegetarianism involves a greater cruelty to animals than my addiction to beef and mutton. Now I wish well to dumb animals. I wish them to live in multitudes. Therefore, I will eat all the chops and steaks I can without injury to my digestion. I'm 'principled' that way. And don't you see, Shibly, that you're locally bound to come and have a steak with me?"

"I'm a vegetarian on principle," said Shibly, morosely, as he went up the steps to the state house.—Boston Transcript.

NEWS FROM HOME.

It Proved Slightly Embarrassing to a Young Lady in the City.

A bevy of fashionable dressed young ladies boarded a Park avenue car yesterday, says the Rochester Herald and were followed by a lady of advanced years, who wore a dress of the Samantha Allen style and a bonnet that bore evidence of having been trimmed by Mother Eve's milliner. The girls giggled considerably till the lady before mentioned happened to recognize one of them and addressed her with: "Why, Sissy! How nice you be dressed since you came to the city. If you haven't got on the same gown that your Aunt Sophronia used to wear, but it is made over so good that I shouldn't hardly know it." The young lady blushed, but the speaker kept on: "Your pa has got his potatoes most dug, and he says that when he gets through with them he is going to drive out and take you home for a few days. He has got a top buggy that he bought at Bill Smith's auction. He says he couldn't afford to have it, but it was going so cheap that he took it." Here the car stopped at Union street and the young lady got off, saying something about having to stop in and see her aunt. When last seen she was calming her agitated nerves as she gazed at the placid surface of the East avenue brick pavement.

OLCOTT AND THE KING OF SWEDEN.

Col. H. S. Olcott, president-founder of the Theosophical society, was given a rousing audience at his lecture in San Francisco just before leaving for Japan on important business relative to the Buddhist church.

That the colonel was frequently the guest of ruling potentates and high priests of Asia has been heard, but the following from a Theosophical paper may be news to Bee readers:

Previous to his leaving the European headquarters on his journey home via the United States and Japan, the president-founder paid a short visit to Sweden. He went by Hull and Gotenborg to Stockholm, and returned via Copenhagen, Hamburg, Bremen and Flushing. The colonel reports that he found the Swedish branch even more commendable than he had supposed, full of zeal, good feeling and earnestness. The three days he spent were naturally very busy: On Sept. 8 he attended a meeting of the branch and on the 9th lectured in the hall of the Academy of Sciences. H. M. the King, who is probably the most cultured of European monarchs, and who presided over the last Congress of Orientalists, through the intervention of the American ambassador, granted Col. Olcott a private audience and conversed with him about an hour on theosophical and cognate subjects. The Swedish members gave the president a most hospitable welcome, and numerous suppers, conversazioni, and farewell dinners.

WOMEN CONVICTS.

Unequaled Heroism Shown by These Branded Criminals.

Amid the stories of death which have been told in Calcutta is one that redounds to the herosm of women and one which should be strongly put before the authorities so that the participants in the noble deeds may be rewarded as they deserve. Surely, women who would risk their lives in a raging sea to save others with the wind howling with such demoniacal fury that to stand against it was almost beyond the power of human strength, deserve some recognition, and this is what women—women convicts in the Andaman islands, did.

As has been announced, the steamer Enterprise, used by the government to convey convicts to the Andaman islands, which is the penal settlement of the East Indias, was lost during the cyclone. Later intelligence shows that when the storm burst the steamer was caught unprepared and that she was blown with terific force and speed onto the shore. She dashed upon the rocks lying opposite the female prison, and lying there a wreck the seas swept clean over her.

The wreck of the vessel was seen by a number of the female convicts who were seeking shelter from the fury of the gale and they, with a heroism seldom equaled by women, started for the shore. Slowly and painfully they forced themselves against the storm, grasping the rocks and other things to prevent themselves from being literally blown away. At last they reached the shore.

Here, nothing daunted by the thundering in-rush of the waters, which at times swept high above their heads, they formed a human life-line, each woman grasping the others' hands. Then the bravest of the party, at the head of the line, rushed into the sea and grasped a struggling form seen twirling and twisting in the water, and, aided by her companions, dragged ashore one of the men who had been swept from the wreck of the Enterprise. Again and again the women entered the water and each time they returned with a man, who, had it not been for their heroic aid, would surely have been drowned.

Of the 83 men comprising the officers and crew of the Enterprise, only six were saved, and every one of the six were dragged from the water by the noble hearted women—noble hearted and self-sacrificing though they have been branded as criminals.

Every English officer and every English member of the crew of the Enterprise was lost.

RED HAIR.

The prejudice against red hair is as wide-spread and deep-rooted as it is unaccountable. Tradition assigns red hair to both Absalom and Judas. Thus, Rosalind (complaining of her lover's tardiness) pettishly exclaims: "His own hair is of the dissembling color!" And is answered by Celia: "Somewhat browner than Judas's." Marston, also, in his "Insatiate Countess," says: "I ever thought by his red beard he'd prove a Judas; here am I bought and sold."

But Leonardo da Vinci, it may be noted in passing, in his great painting, "The Last Judgment," paints Judas with black hair.

All over Europe red hair is associated with treachery and deceitfulness. In a collection of German proverbs made by Henry Bebel as early as 1512, occurs the following: "The short in stature are naturally proud; the red-haired are untrustworthy." "In England," Thomas Hughes says, "I know learned men that will never admit a red-haired person into their service." An old French proverb says: "Salute no red-haired man nor bearded woman nearer than 30 feet off, with three stones in thy fist to defend thee in thy need." In Sweden the prejudice against red hair is explained on the ground that the traitor, Jarl Asbjorn, who betrayed King Canute to his death, was red-haired. But even the ancient Egyptians had the same horror of red-haired persons. One reason assigned for this prejudice was the fact that a red-haired man was most likely a foreigner, and it is a well known fact that the Egyptian naturally despises all other races of men. But, in addition to the above reason, red was also symbolical of Typho, the evil spirit: therefore, anyone with a ruddy complexion was suspected of being in league with the evil one.

Exporting of apples to Europe is becoming one of the most important features of the trade. Up to the first week in November fifty-five thousand barrels had been shipped from New York since the season began. Last year 195,164 barrels were sent abroad.

GIVING CATTLE IMPURE WATER.

Reports from Experiments made at Agricultural Experiment Stations.

In a recent bulletin of the Iowa experiment station, Dr. M. Stalker, veterinarian of the station, gives the following interesting account of an outbreak of malignant diseases among live stock:

During the latter part of the summer of 1890, I had occasion to investigate a severe outbreak of disease on a farm in one of the counties of Iowa. The animals, including horses, cattle and pigs, were all affected in the same way. The local symptoms were largely confined to the throat. There was a swelling, partial paralysis of the walls of the upper air passages and painful and difficult breathing. The animals attacked uniformly died after an illness of about two days. The disease I could not recognize as belonging to any of the well-defined types with which I was acquainted. Here were horses, cattle and pigs, sick and dying with disease showing the same symptoms in all. There are few if any of the specific forms of disease that spread as epizootic among the widely differing species of domestic animals. I could not classify the disease, and at once set about the task of discovering, if possible, some common source of exposure. The pastures, buildings and water supply were each in turn subjected to a careful scrutiny. The buildings were such as are to be found on ordinary Iowa farms, fairly comfortable and clean. I could find no clue in the quantity or quality of feed that promised to lead to a solution of the difficulty. On investigation of the water supply, I found that most of the animals on the farm drank from a small creek that ran a zigzag course through the premises. The stream was in part supplied from a series of springs, and in ordinary seasons afforded a fair amount of water, which ran, at least for a portion of its course, over a gravelly bed. The present dry summer, with several previous ones, showing an abnormally light rainfall, has so reduced the amount of water that it has ceased to run. On making examination and conducting inquiries, I ascertained that it had been the custom on the farm to throw the carcasses of animals down the steep bluffs into the bed of the stream.

I further learned that during the summer, chicken cholera had prevailed on the farm and that a large number of chickens had died and been thrown over the bank. I was also informed that the hog cholera had caused the death of a considerable number of swine, the carcasses having been treated in a similar manner. The several yards occupied by horses, cattle, pigs and barnyard fowls, were on the hillside with abrupt drainage to the creek. In addition to this large heaps of fermenting manure were deposited about the foot of the hill near the edge of the stream, where the animals went to drink. A few of the animals on the farm had not had access to the stream, but had been watered from a well. None of these had showed signs of sickness, though they had been in daily contact with those that had their water from the pools in the bed of the stream, and even with some of the sick. On looking up the local geography of the neighborhood, I found that a number of farmers had built their homes along the banks of this stream, and had been accustomed to make use of it in much the same way as the farmer above referred to. Inquiry elicited the fact that on no less than four farms situated on the banks of this stream, animals had died showing symptoms identical with those on the farm first investigated. I regarded the evidence as sufficient to make out a strong case against the impurity of the water and gave an opinion accordingly.

The above is but a single instance out of many that have come under my observation. It is one of the most glaring, but by no means one attended with the greatest degree of loss. On another occasion where a high rate of mortality had prevailed among the cattle running on the open prairie, I was able to trace the cause to contamination of surface water. An animal dead from anthrax had been drawn into a basin on the open prairie. Later the rains filled the basin with water, and about one thousand cattle on the range had access to the pond for water supply. The result was that about ten per cent. of all the animals having access to the impure water, died from anthrax. The teachings of these objects lessons are sufficiently obvious. These animals are endowed with organizations not unlike our own, and the manifest laws of being and of health can no more be violated with impunity by them, than by ourselves.

CURRENT TOPICS.

The Russian government is about to build, at an estimated cost of $175,000,000, says the Baltimore Sun, a railway some 5,000 miles long to bring its provinces on the Pacific into closer communication with the rest of the empire. The motive of this great outlay is, of course, chiefly political. There is to be ultimately, it is felt, a struggle with China in the east, and the railway is required to enable Russia to meet China on equal terms. Vladivostock, the eastern terminus of the railway, is to be made a first-class fortress—a second Sebastopol. From that port Russian ships of war will issue with a freedom denied them in the Baltic and Black sea. The completion of the new railway is promised in 1895, but 1900 is a more likely date.

Ultimately it is expected that the trans-Siberian railway will pay commercially. Siberia is a better country, it is said, than Canada. If the Canadian Pacific did so much for the development of agriculture, manufacturing and mining in western and northwestern Canada, much more would a trans-Siberian railway do for the fertile, but unpeopled, regions of southern Siberia. In the district between Chelabinsk and Troitak alone there are 25,000,000 acres of arable land, only nine per cent. of which is now under cultivation. With the introduction of facilities for transportation the lawlessness that has hitherto blasted Central Asia will end and the conditions will be established under which industry will get its reward, cities will be built and commerce will widen its sway. As a means of extending Russian civilization, whatever it is worth, the new enterprise is undoubtedly important.

The carriage of tea would give the road, it is estimated, a yearly revenue of $6,000,000; other goods $6,500,000. There would be a saving of $1,000,000 a year in the conveyance of criminals, exiles, officials, stores, etc. The annual expenses including interest at four per cent., would be some $17,400,000. A deficit of $1,000,000 is expected. These figures, however, are doubtless rosy. The experience of our government with the Pacific railways suggests that the Russian government will be fortunate if it finds its deficit for twenty years to come under $5,000,000 a year. Our government officials have managed the public interest in railways very badly, and Russian government officials can probably give points to ours.

The day set for the meeting of the national republican convention is not so early as was expected or generally desired. The reasons for the date chosen are not apparent, but as the climate of Minneapolis is usually pleasant at that season, there probably will be no inconvenience on account of the heat. The first republican convention was held June 17, 1856; the next in 1860, on May 16; in 1864, on June 7; in 1868, on May 20; in 1872, on June 5; in 1876, on June 2; in 1880, on June 2; in 1884, on June 3; in 1888, on June 19. It will be seen by these dates that only twice in thirty-five years has the convention been held later than the date set for that of 1891, June 7, and those two occasions were the first and last conventions.

Collectors of interesting personalities are already compiling the necrology of 1891 and note these eminent names: Bancroft, Lossing and Kinglake, the historians; Parnell, Balmaceda, Boulanger, Bradlaugh, ex-President Grevy, ex-Vice President Hamlin, Sir John Macdonald, Secretary Windam and William Henry Smith in politics; Lowell and Winchell in general literature; Lawrence Barrett, Marie Wilt and Emma Abbott on the stage; Sherman, Von Moltke and Joseph E. Johnston, the soldiers; George Jones, the editor, and Kalakaua, Karl I. of Wurtemberg, Prince Jerome Napoleon and the Ameer of Afghanistan, kings and the like.

The Daughters of American Revolution, says the Washington Star, have made a good beginning in their praiseworthy efforts to study the history of the origin of our government. It is one of the finest topics of secular interest that can engage the attention of intelligent Americans and the ladies have in it a noble field for the development in the rising generation and the generation yet to come of that knowledge which is the mainstay of reasonable patriotism. To be an American in the highest sense is to know and feel the truths known to our fathers when they built on the liberties of Englishmen the right, liberties and glory of the United States of America. The basis of the republic is the home, the foundation of which is the purity, modesty, devotion and intelligence of the women. The more the women of the republic know of its origin the broader become the securities for its perpetuation.

The Ohio election being safely past it is not likely that the organs of protection will attempt to explain away the suggestive circumstances that the Armour Packing company came near having to shut down its works the other day because of the delay in the arrival of a shipment of tin-plate from Wales. The shipment, amounting to 3,100 boxes, was several days behind time, and, as no tin-plate could be found in the American mills, which have not flourished since the damand for campaign badges fell off, the firm was for a time in serious embarrassment.—Chicago Times.

This is a season for the starting of charitable enterprises. One of the most practical is that of the St. Bartholomew parish house, which has just been opened in New York. In the basement of the building is a coffee house under a capable manager. For 18 cents a regular dinner is served, consisting of soup, meat and pie, while coffee and rolls can be had for 5 cents. Vegetables are 4 and 5 cents a dish, while sirloin steak is 15 cents. In the basement also are commodious bath rooms, while on the first floor are halls for religious work. The floor above is devoted to the uses of women and girls in the shape of club rooms, rooms for sewing drawing and reading. Above them are similar provisions for men and boys. The danger at the present time in the strong tendency to such enterprises is the overdoing of it. A little self-help is as important as contributed help.

"Gath" has come across still another reason for the late republican defeat. Clarkson's opinion of republican newspapers is generally remembered, but the republican leader who has confided in Mr. Townsend pitches into the editors. He says:

"The absence of self-denying, public-loving editors of the republican press enters largely into our decay as a party. We had once Greeley, Raymond, Webb, Bryant, Weed, Dana—men not concerned with the counting room, too capable and too congenially employed to ask compensation in office for their editorial devotion. In these days the republican editors are either enjoying office abroad and avoiding any controversy which will subject them to criticism, or are mad with the party because it considered the editor across the way more than themselves; or are attachments or scions of rich families—the Shepards, Marquands, Goodwins, etc., trying to escape the intellectual and social obscurity by mining their names on a Hoe press. We have no editors out of office."

The above is the terrible record of killed and wounded in an appalling railroad collision in this city Saturday evening.

Never in the history of Toledo has such an accident occurred, or one that involved such serious consequences. Seven people killed and 19 more or less seriously injured.

About 6 o'clock Saturday evening the news of a dreadful catastrophe at the union depot was reported. The rumor spread over the city in an incredibly short space of time, and like all such reports it enlarged as it flew until finally the number of killed was placed at 40 and the injured at double that number.

The actual facts were bad enough. One little life crushed out instantly and four others hovering on the brink of death, while upwards of 20 were more or less injured.

The Lake Shore, Chicago and Boston vestibuled special, due here at 4:55, was run into by the Flint & Pere Marquette passenger, due at the union depot at 4:53, just outside the tunnel, near the corner of Field and Segur avenues.

It appears from the investigation that has already been made that both trains were from five to fifteen minutes late.

The Lake Shore special passed Air Line Junction at 4:55, 6 minute late, the F. & P. M. immediately following, also late.

Sketch a Few Minutes After the Collision.

After leaving the tunnel at Field avenue the special was flagged for a freight and stopped. The flagman was sent back to flag and stop the incoming F. & P. M. passenger, but the tunnel, being full of steam and smoke, he was afraid to enter, and while he was considering what was best to do he heard the rumble of the F. & P. M. train, and before he could give the necessary warning the train had dashed out of the tunnel and into the rear end of the special, which had come to a dead stop about four car length aways.

A most horrible scene followed. The special was composed of seven cars—three sleepers, a dining room, a baggage and a day coach. The last was on the rear end of the train and full of passengers.

Without a word of warning the engine of the F. & P. M. dashed into the rear coach spreading death and destruction on every side. Neither the coach nor the engine left the track. The coach, by the force of the collision, was raised from the rear trucks and the passengers thrown in a heap towards the front door. Several steam pipes of the engine burst and belched forth death on the shrieking, maddened inmates of the coach.

The iron railing on the front platform was so twisted that the door of the coach refused to open, and the passengers were being slowly but surely boiled to death when rescue came.

Willing hands were at work in an instant. Several men in the car had kicked out a window and escaped with but a few bruises. Among the first to jump from a window thus broken was T. J. West, a traveling salesman of Detroit. His hands were cut and bleeding, and he complained of bruises in his lower limbs. His name so far has not appeared among the list of injured, as does not several other names printed in the list given above. Miss Dolly Fisher, of this city, was about the next to jump. Friendly hands helped her, and she was sent to her home in a carriage. Her injuries were not serious, although for the time being very painful.

The work of rescue went bravely on. The smashing of windows, the shrieks of the injured, mingled with the hissing roar of the escaping steam, made it a horrible scene.

When the rescuers reached the head of the engine, about in the middle of the car, the McDonald infant was found. It was dead and seemingly had been boiled alive. On the other side of the engine lay the dead baby's brother, still alive but unconscious.

One by one the injured were taken out and placed in a sleeper, which in the meantime had been detached from the train and the unfortunate were taken to the Union depot. Drs. Hollister, Fisher, Munn and others were on hand, and gave all the medical attendance possible. Two ambulances were called, and those who could be removed were taken to St. Vincent's hospital.

Two deaths occurred in the car. Mrs. Susan McCoy, after suffering frightfully, died three hours after the accident, and the McDonald boy passed away a little later.

Four deaths occurred at St. Vincent's yesterday, Miss Ella Mayer, who was en route from Chicago to Cleveland, died about 9:30 yesterday morning, Vaughn died earlier and Thomas McQueen's sufferings ceased about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Little Maude McKenzie whose sufferings were terrible, died yesterday afternoon.

Chief of Police O'Dwyer with a squad of patrolmen was on the scene of the wreck soon after it occurred, and his men performed good work in assisting to rescue the passengers and keep order about the place which was crowded with spectators.

What the Depot Master Saw.

Depot Master Clarke was among the first on the scene. In conversation with a Bee he said: "Shortly after 5 o'clock one of the passenger brakemen came running to the depot and reported what had happened. I went directly to Superintendent Whittlesey's office and informed him of the accident. An instant later every phone about the building was pressed into service, calling for ambulances, doctors and assistance of any nature. Mr. Whittlesey ordered out every clerk in the office and all employes about the depot to render any assistance possible. The clerks were also instructed to seek for identification of the dead and injured. I then hurried down to the wreck, and it was a scene that I hope and pray to never witness again. The engine had crushed into the coach, fairly entrapping the unfortunate passengers, and the escaping steam transformed the car into a bake-oven or steam chest.

"All present were soon at work removing the injured from the debris. Those that were most seriously injured were carried into a Wagner sleeper, while others were removed to hacks and the ambulances, which had arrived, and taken to the hospital. Of the number who were taken out of the wreck there were three who were evidently in a dying condition, a woman and two children. They were taken aboard the sleeper, and the train run to the depot, where the sleeper was cut out and left on the side track. A card was found on the lady's person identifying her as a Mrs. McCoy, wife of a doctor in Ransom, Ill. We telegraphed him at once and soon received a reply that he was on the way.

"All three were unconscious, and we supposed the children belonged to the woman, but it developed later that the children belonged to a woman named McDonald who had been taken to the hospital. The babe, a sweet little thing less than a year old, was the first to die. The other child, a boy about 7 years of age, died next at 8:20, and the woman passed away at 8:50.

"The Lake Shore engineer told me they struck him at precisely 5 o'clock, and at 5:35 we had procured ambulance wagons, carriages and medical aid, had brought out the police patrol and fire department and had the dead and injured out of the wreck, and had them all cared for."

The Superintendent's Statement.

Superintendent Whittlesey made the following statement to a Bee:

"When a train enters the limits of the yard it is responsible for its own safety and is expected to protect itself. This train was six minutes late at Air Line Junction. When nearing the tunnel under the canal it was flagged down by a train in advance, and of course came to a standstill. The brakeman and conductor both state that they hurried back through the train to protect the rear end. When they arrived here they found the tunnel full of steam and smoke, and in another instant the Flint & Perre Marquette train dashed by and into the coach hooked onto the end of the sleepers. Our train was protected, so far as human effort could accomplish anything. The Flint & Perre Marquette must have been going at an unwarranted rate of speed to strike and demolish a coach as in this case.

"Every engineer and conductor that runs into these yards has but one rule, which, if adhered to, all such accidents would be avoided, and that is to the effect that all trains within the limits of the yards must proceed with great caution, and at all times under such control as to be able to stop within the limits of vision."

This accident occurred under rather peculiar circumstances, and it is very probable that the Flint & Pere Marquette train was running at an excessive rate of speed. As the accompanying cut will show two tracks are laid in the tunnel under the canal, near Field avenue.

Two trains had just passed, and the result was the tunnel was filled with steam and smoke. When the Flint & Pere Marquette came up, it was simply impossible to see beyond the tunnel.

Superintendent Whittelsey placed the Lake Shore telegraph service at the free disposal of all persons who desired to use it relative to the accident, in fact did everything in his power to assist those so unfortunate, in their hour of need.

Scenes at the Undertaker's.

Among the ghastly relics at Undertaker Couldwell's is the amputated hand of a child—that of the McDonald boy. It was found at the scene of the wreck by some boys, but so mangled that for some time it was not recognized as, a hand. The boys had it on the platform and were showing it around as a relic of the wreck.

Dr. McCoy, of Ransom, arrived in the city at 4 o'clock this morning, and departed on the next train for home with the remains of his wife. He was distracted, and when he looked on the discolored face his grief was pitable to behold.

Mr. Couldwell received a dispatch from friends of Vaughan's to forward the body to the dead man's home in Massachusetts, and the request will be complied with today.

McQueen's friends will take the remains to Elkhart this afternoon, and the bodies of the two McDonald children will be placed in the vault at Calvary cemetery this afternoon.

The body of the little McKenzie girl was received at the undertaker's this forenoon and will be casketed waiting further orders from the parents.

G. W. Goodwin, of 330 Thirteenth street, visited Couldwell's this forenoon with the purpose of identifying the remains of Vaughn, but the face was so discolored owing to the burns that he was unable to do so. He believes Vaughn is a relative of Mrs. Goodwin.

The McDonald children were terribly burned and mangled. As they lay in the little white caskets side by side this morning the dreadful injuries to the face and head could be readily seen. The elder boy was frightfully burned about the forehead, and one hand was cut off at the wrist. McQueen and Vaughan lay in handsome caskets furnished by Mr. Cauldwell, at the request of friends of the deceased.

Topic of Conversation on the Streets.

The disastrous wreck is the topic of conversation on the streets and about offices and other places of business today, and the channel is generally in the course of the cause of the terrible affair, who is to blame, and who will be held responsible.

Railroad men speak more intelligently on the subject as they are generally better posted as to the manner and system of operating trains, and they are not so hasty to come to conclusions.

Said one of them to a Bee: "The coroner's inquest will reveal the true cause of the wreck, and probably fix the blame on the proper person. One of the two companies will have to pay very dearly for this affair, and the coroner's verdict will, in all probability, determine which company is guilty, and for this reason the fight between them will be very bitter. The case will be brought out in testimony to the slightest detail.

Another thing, orders are imperative that no freight train or yard crews at work shall obstruct the main track on or about the time of the arrival of passenger trains. If this is the case what was this freight train doing on the main track in the yards at this time, when it was known that both the F. & P. M. and Lake Shore passenger trains were late. If the yardmaster had orders to let that freight train go, the man who issued the orders is responsible. Freight trains always get stuck at that curve, and this train had no business on the main track at this time. Had this freight train been out of the way, No. 6 would not have been stopped and the accident would not have happened.

"Then here is another point that will cut a big figure before the coroner. It is claimed that the brakeman of the freight train stood on the west side of the tunnel when he flagged No. 6 down. Now, if he did, the question comes up, why did not the brakeman of No. 6 drop off at the same place and protect his train?

"The truth of the matter is, the whole business, including all roads, is operated in a hap-hazard manner, and it is only by sheer good luck that similar accidents have not happened before. The crew of No. 6 supposed the F. & P. M. had arrived, as this train is scheduled ahead of No. 6. Instead, the F. & P. M. was late and was following No. 6. Now, is it any wonder the accident occurred? Both of those trains were coming into Toledo without the first intimation of the whereabouts or time of any other train, trusting to luck and a clear atmosphere to guide them safely through. No doubt just such an accident would have occurred before this, but the trains happened to come together at a spot where there was nothing to obstruct the vision of the engineers. Two trains had just passed through that tunnel, and the smoke will hang about the damp walls for five minutes. Under the circumstances, if No. 6 had her signals properly displayed they could not have been seen through the dense smoke. Grant that the F. & P. M. engineer noticed the smoke and shut off the steam, with the heavy train he had and the steep grade against him, in that short distance he couldn't possibly have stopped his train."

"Then here is another point: The orders, as I understand them, are, as well as a city ordinance, prohibit a speed of over six miles an hour, which is a mile in ten minutes. You take the schedules of either of these roads and the rate of speed in the city will figure out a considerably higher rate. So you see the engineer is between two fires. If he don't make the time he is censured, and, if he does, and comes to grief in the city while doing it, he is in for it again. It is an ill wind that blows nobody good, and now perhaps the block system in the yards will be adopted, and such occidents avoided in the future."

Symptoms of Pneumonia.

Inquiries at St. Vincent's to-day shows that all the patients passed a somewhat restful night. The little McKenzie girl was very ill last evening, but was reported better this morning. Drs. Hollister and Van Pelt, who are in constant attendance on the patients, say that in no case is another death expected to-day. Symptoms of pneumonia have appeared in several of the cases, and should it not be counteracted promptly there will be several more deaths. Miss McKenzie is terribly burned, and Mrs. McKenzie is also very ill. The rest of the patients at the hospital are said to be improving, and at noon all were resting easy.

Latest reports from St. Vincent's were to the effect that all the patients, except Pearl McKenzie, were unchanged and no further deaths are anticipated to-day. Miss McKenzie is, however, very low and not expected to live.

Mrs. Nelson was resting comfortably, and her condition was something better than it was last evening and night.

Joseph A. Ludwig, one of the injured from Peoria, Ill., is at his brother-in-law's, Albert Begmoser, 41 Tenth street, and is getting along nicely.

Charlie Burdick's Escape.

Charlie Burdick, son of Leander Burdick and State Auditor of Wyoming, was an occupant of the wrecked car. He had a miraculous escape. He sat nearly in the center of the car and while those in front and back of him were killed and hurt he escaped. When the crash came he rushed for the door, but finding the way blockaded he sprang through a window receiving a bad cut on the nose and some bruises. Anderson, who was so seriously injured, occupied the same seat with him until near Toledo, when Mr. Burdick moved one seat forward. Two seats ahead sat Mr. and Mrs. James, also badly burned. Ahead of them were the McKenzies, and two seats behind him sat Miss Mayer.

T. J. West, of Detroit, also escaped through a window. He told as Bee that the two McDonald children occupied a rear seat, and that their mother when the train stopped had passed along to the front of the car after a drink of water. A rush was made for the door, but its failure to open added to the panic and the struggle to gain an exit became so fierce that some were trampled and perhaps hurt.

Incidents About the Passengers.

Mr. J. A. McKenzie, of Chicago, had with him his whole family, consisting of his wife and two daughters, Maude and Pearl. They were on their way east, and now little 12-year old Maude is dead and the others are severely injured, but it is thought will recover.

Mr. George James, the actor, and his wife, whose stage name is Miss Lizzie Goode, were on their way to New York from Denver. Both are severely injured, but not dangerously. Mrs. James has received numerous messages of sympathy from friends in New York, among which was a message from Mrs. George Barnum, of this city. A strange co-incidence is that Mr. and Mrs. Barnum are now playing with The Danger Signal.

Mr. C. Hinderer, agent of the Buckeye Brewing company, of Goshen, Ind., was coming to this city on business, and is now lying at the Union hotel, but not seriously injured

Dr. R. Murphy, of East Toledo, who was somewhat burned, was returning home from a trip and met this terrible reception.

Thomas McQueen, who died of the injuries received in the wreck, lives at Elkhart, Ind., and he was on his way to Toledo to visit his sister, Mrs. Evart Canfield, whose husband is telegraph operator at Wagon Works Junction. He was an estimable young man, but 24 years of age, and his sister, who anticipated much from his visit, is nearly heartbroken.

Mrs. J. Mack and her cousin, Miss Annie Mack, who were badly scalded, were returning to their home in New York, from a trip to the west when their journey received this awful termination. They are lying at St. Vincent's hospital.

Coroner's Inquest.

Coroner Roulet commenced his inquest on the affair at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The inquest is being held in the grand jury room at the court house and there is a large attendance. The matter will be thoroughly investigated and an effort made to locate the blame. Prosecutor Barber and ex-Prosecutor Southard are assisting the coroner.

An Afflicted Family.

Mrs. Nelson was on her way home from Des Moines with the remains of her daughter, Mrs. Potter. Her son-in-law, Mr. Walter Potter, who was also seriously injured, sat in the same seat with her. It was a sad home-coming, and Harry Nelson, who was at the depot awaiting the arrival of his dead sister, was completely overcome by the record sudden affliction.

All three—the dead and injured—were taken to the Nelson residence on Jefferson street, and the scenes of sorrow and suffering at that home yesterday and the preceding night were simply indescribable.

The Death of Miss Mayer.

This morning's Cleveland Leader has the following relative to Miss Mayer, one of the victims:

Miss Ella Mayer, of this city, died in St. Vincent's hospital, Toledo, early yesterday morning from injuries received in the Lake Shore wreck at Toledo Saturday afternoon. She was in the sleeping-car which was demolished when the engine of the Fline & Pere Marquette train crashed through the heavy timbers of the coach. The wonder is that she was not instantly killed so near was she to the point where the engine stopped after the collision. She was fearfully scalded and burned, and after being taken from the wreck never fully regained consciousness. She was returning from Chicago, where she had been for two months, and intended visiting her sisters in this city, Mrs. Dr. Noyes, of No. 32 Sixth avenue, and Miss Dora Mayer, who lives at No. 387 Prospect street. Her sisters went to Toledo as soon as they heard of the accident. Before she left Cleveland she was a clerk in Crow & Whitmarsh's store. The two sisters returned from Toledo with the remains early last night. The casket was taken to Hogan & Harris' undertaking rooms. The funeral will take place from No. 10 Keyes street at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

Costly Manner of Learning.

The serious railroad collision at Toledo Saturday night seems to have been the result of bad management, to say the least. No careful railroad man will send one passenger train through a tunnel two minutes behind another, as these trains are said to have been scheduled to run. The wonder is not that the collision occurred Saturday night, but that it has not occurred before. It takes a smashup occasionally to show just how recklessly some railroads are managed.—Cleveland Leader.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES.

Political Equality Club—Day Nursery Circle—Notes.

One of the most interesting meetings of the Political Equality club since its organization was that held Saturday afternoon, in room 9, Fort Industry block. In the absence of President Murphy, the vice-president, Miss Mary Law, presided. After the transaction of routine business the study hour of the club was given to reading and discussion of a chapter from John Fiske's "Civil Government of the United States," and another from Harriet R. Shattuck's "Parliamentary Laws." A number of members of the club reported securing signatures to the petitions for school suffrage, while some reported that ladies who were urged to sign the petitions objected because there was no property or educational qualification attached. At the next meeting of the club, which will be held in the same place Saturday afternoon, December 12, the members will discuss the advisability of holding the club meetings around at the houses of members.

The Day Nursery Circle met at 101 Oak street Saturday afternoon. After discussion of the action of the previous meeting, the by-laws were so amended that all members of the circle assumed such active duties as had been delegated to the board of managers. It was decided that admission to the nursery should be limited to children between the ages of two months and six years, and that an admission fee of five cents be asked for each child taken in. Committees reported progress, and that it was expected artificial gas and water would be secured for the building this week. It is hoped the nursery will be formally opened next week. The circle meets again at the same place next Saturday afternoon.

The directors of the Humane Society meet to-morrow evening in the rooms of the society.

The Todelo Suffrage Society holds its regular monthly meeting in room 9, Fort Industry block, Wednesday afternoon. All women invited.

Miss Emily Bouton reads the paper before the Women's Colloquial Club on Friday afternoon.

THUG SHOT

While Trying to Escape from Detective Spore.

Charles Faber, better known as "Red Leary," a notorious petty thief, river pirate and general bad character, is lying on a cot at the police station with a bullet over his hip. The ball came from Detective Spore's revolver, and was administered while Faber was making a desperate effort to escape from that officer.

The wounded man was arrested Saturday afternoon about 5 o'clock by Detectives Nichter, Spore and Brown, who had a search warrant for his place and were looking for stolen goods which Faber is suspected of concealing. It is also thought that he has had a hand in obtaining some of the goods by foul means.

Detective Spore started to the station with his man, who appeared docile enough, but at the corner of Washington and Erie streets the prisoner broke away from the officer and made a dash for liberty. He refused to stop at Spore's command, and the officer then fired upon him, the bullet striking him above the left hip and bringing him to the ground. He was then taken to the station in the patrol wagon, and the wound was attended to by Dr. Fisher, but the bullet could not be found. Faber is resting easy to-day, and the wound is not considered dangerous.

"Red Leary" is the father of young Faber, who was one of the two boys who slashed two men with razors about a week ago, and who is yet at liberty. Young St. Clair, who was in the cutting affray with Faber, was given up by his father Saturday, and is now in custody. These men are all desperate characters, and belong to a bad gang of petty thieves who have been committing numerous depredations lately.

CRAZED BY SUFFERING.

Succor Came Just in Time to the Brig Argonaut's Crew.

Chicago, Nov. 30.—Captain Holland, of the Philadelphia brig Odorilla, writes to H. D. May & Co., his agents in this city from Vera Cruz, under date of November 20, that he passed the distressed British brig Argonaut when five days out from New York, with the crew in a starving condition. Hunger and thirst had nearly set them crazy, the vessel having been caught in a heavy gale, which destroyed all provisions and burst the fresh-water casks. She was bound from Fernandinia to Rio Janeiro with lumber, and was half full of water.

The lack of water caused the most trouble, and the crew were in such desperate straits that they were compelled to squeeze the water from some potatoes they had on board to save their lives. Every one took turns in sipping the drops of life as they came to their parched lips. Captain Holland would not allow them to lay to until the next day, supplying them with every need, and gave them the correct position to the nearest land. He says he lost 100 miles while supplying their needs, as the wind was fair, and when he lost sight of them they were all in better shape.

Old Jed Prouty.

At Wheeler's opera house next Friday, December 4, Richard Golden will present, for the first time in Toledo, his quaint characterization of down east village life, Old Jed Prouty, of Bucksport, Maine. The plot of the play is claimed to be based on certain occurrences in Bucksport some fifteen years since, in which Old Prouty, a popular inn-keeper of that time, figured very creditably. The pith of the story relates to the attempted execution of a bogus mortgage on the Prouty inn, in which Landlord Prouty and village 'Squire Todd were bitterly arrayed against each other. The Squire's connection with the case was purely official, but it was the marriage engagement of his daughter with Old Prouty's son that made the breach uglier—Old Prouty hoping for at least some little consideration from the 'Squire, who, believing the mortgage genuine, proposed to administer justice even at the sacrifice of his old chum, the landlord, and the infliction of misery on the young lovers. The test of true Yankee character in the heat of anger and tribulation and the good nature and cheerfulness that ever were uppermost, are the lessons taught by the play. Manager Harry Hine has surrounded his star by a particularly strong company and has also added a superior quartet. The sale of seats opens Wednesday next.

WILL SAIL FOR IRELAND.

Parnell's Mother to Cross the Stormy Deep.

New York, Nov. 30.—A special to the Journal from Bordentown, N. J., says Mrs. Delia Parnell and her son John, who arrived from Georgia yesterday, will sail for Ireland on the Majestic on Wednesday next.

It is understood that Mrs. Charles Stewart Parnell has relinquished all claim to the Avondale estate, and John Parnell will therefore become the owner.

It is for this purpose the trip is taken. It is not known how long Mrs. Parnell will remain on the other side, but when matters there are settled up she will return to this country and end her days at the old homestead in Bordentown.

WILL NOT PROSECUTE.

Beals Will Let the Abductors of His Child Escape.

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 30.—Public excitement over the Beals kidnaping case has subsided to a very great extent, principally because of the public announcement that Mr. Beals will not prosecute the abductors.

Mr. Beals claims that his honor is involved because he gave his word that he would ask no questions if his child was only returned.

The police say that promise related only to the person who returned the child and ought not to allow him to refrain from doing all in his power to convict Mr. and Mrs. King, now under arrest for the crime.

DESTROYED BY FIRE.

Large Portion of a Minnesota Town in Ashes.

Tracy, Minn., Nov. 30.—A large section of the business portion of this place is in ashes from a fire which broke out at 11 o'clock Sunday morning on Front street in the Hughes building.

The wind was blowing a gale and the flames spread rapidly. Facilities were inadequate and all that could be done was to save some of the contents of the buildings in the path of the flames. All the buildings between Third and Fourth streets, except the State bank, were destroyed. Help finally arrived from Marshall and the fire was brought under control.

The buildings burned were: R. E. Hughes' general store and residence, J. J. Hartigan's saloon, H. C. Haines' shoe store, J. B. Waugh's hotel, Braun's restaurant, Bedlee & Segner's meat market, Allen Bates' confectionery, Gibbs' hotel, D. Stafford's hardware store, G. Peterson's tailor shop, O. L. Partridge's general store, and J. D. Owen's general store. Several smaller losses are included and a number of families are without homes. Every hotel in the place is gone. There are suspicions of incendiarism, but nothing definite is known.

Laylin of Huron is working the rural members for speaker while Griffin is playing with the city delegations.

Crisp rises to explain that he is a sincere tariff reformer of the Cleveland stripe, even if the protection wing of the party does advocate his election as speaker.

The Commercial is deserving of great credit for its splendid account of the railway accident which occurred in the Lake Shore yards on Saturday evening. In descriptive work and in detail report it is excellent and complete, and shows the efficiency of the Commercial reportorial staff.

If the Foraker workers were to propose that John Sherman rest his senatorial chances on the bare possibility of unseating Senator Brice, and allowing Mr. Foraker to have the first caucus election in January, how quickly the refrigerator statesman would resent the suggestion. Yet Mr. Sherman is playing Mr. Foraker for that kind of a sucker.

Senator Brice approves Senator Sherman's explanation of the situation, and says he is ready to have his citizenship closely investigated by the committee on privileges and elections. Mr. Brice ought to know where he claims citizenship, and if any of the partisan weaklings of the republican party think they can dislodge him they will soon discover their awful mistake.

"Reed's quorum" is taken into the courts to test the constitutionality of laws enacted under the quorum-ruling of the reckless parliamentarian from Maine. Whatever parliamentary outrage Speaker Reed may have committed, the proceedings of the house will be legally tested by the journal. It will be impossible for the courts to go back of the journal, and inasmuch as the journal shows the proceedings to be regular the suit in question will come to naught. But there will be no more Reedism in congress; for that the people ought to be thankful.

The business of corporate loaning of money on mortgage security in other states than the charter office of the mortgagees is so great in some of the eastern states that a department of inspection is necessary for the protection of investors. Mr. E. M. McPherson, the commissioner of Foreign Mortgage Corporations in Massachusetts, has just returned from an annual trip of inspection and reports some queer business transactions in Kansas investments. In Wichita which was the boomiest place in the west a few years ago Mr. McPherson found mortgages on suburban property valued at $1,000 an acre at the time of the loan, which to-day cannot be sold under the hammer at $50 an acre. The same reckless investment is reported as to farm loans. Many of the largest mortgages are on the most unproductive sections of Kansas. The experience of the past few years has taught the eastern investors a lesson. There will be as much available capital for investment in the future, but it will be placed with the caution of good business requirements. Then when temporary depression is experienced no serious loss is sustained.

Now that one serious accident, involving fearful loss of life, has occurred in the Lake Shore yards in this city, it is surprising to those familiar with the situation that similar accidents have not been of frequent occurrence. The great number of trains running daily between the Union depot and Air Line Junction involves constant danger, conceding the most intelligent service in the dispatcher's office. That there is more or less reckless running, even though orders are obeyed, is of daily evidence, and at no other place in the country are more lives exposed than between these two stations in Toledo. The fearful responsibility of Saturday's collision may be established in courts of law, but the life loss to the friends of the dead and maimed cannot be measured by jury verdicts. It is a frightful experience that intelligent railway management will seek to avoid in the future, but there is no excuse for negligence in the past. That is apparent to everybody now.

The funny paragraphs in newspapers are not always so labeled. There is such a thing as perpetrating a joke unconsciously. As an example, our esteemed contemporary, the Philadelphia Times, gave a column report the other day of the twenty-fifth anniversary celebration of the Pennsylvania Peace society, the leading head over the article being "Their Voice is for Peace." The report, under such a headline, reads like a burlesque. One gentleman advanced the opinion that the church kept man in poverty and ignorance. The next speaker called the first speaker "a little off;" the next called him "a good deal off," while the next, a lady, said anybody was an anarchist who said the church was wrong. Later, Mrs. Margaret Moore spoke on the wrongs of Ireland, and a Scotch Presbyterian clergyman followed her, proclaiming that Ireland's misery was because she was priest-ridden and never had a John Knox. To him the next speaker replied by pouring hot shot into the Presbyterians, calling them "persecutors par excellence and adepts in burning women." Verily, if these voices were all for peace, and if this is the way the members of the Pennsylvania Peace society agree, the day for beating swords into ploughshares is yet in the dim distance.

THE QUESTION AT ISSUE.

"A foreign person by the name of Schoenhof" is the way high-tariff organs allude to the well-known, scholarly, studious writer who is familiar with the laws and their workings of the countries of Europe and in America as well, but who offends the high-tax advocates by his exposition of their pet measure and its effects, in a series of letters in educational journals. Because he has said we can not bleach fine linens in this country as they can bleach them in the humid fields of north Scotland, is enough to stir their ire to hot denunciation.

The organs mistake; no person of sense says they cannot bleach linen by artificial means in this country, raise tea under cover in Maine, or plant oyster beds in Lake Erie by salting the water sufficiently and making climatic conditions favorable, but the question at issue is: will it pay to tax the people to do these things, or is it better judgment to leave the manufacture and the growing of products to natural laws and conditions, without hindrance or forcement? And why should one industry be boosted at the expense of another? And can the true balance ever be maintained? And has not, already, the cupidity of capitalists outwitted the honest toiler and controlled legislation for his own benefit?

These are the questions to consider instead of allowing the din of falsifiers to fill the ears to the confusion of thought, which is the end desired. No man who opposes the burden of taxation upon the people for the aiding of some particular branch of business does so because he has not the wish to see his own country develop the best that is in it, but because he contends for equal rights and equal opportunities for all its citizens. What does it signify that we have wonderful producing agencies in certain lines, and millionaires that astonish the world with their number and the magnitude of their individual and aggregate wealth—what does this signify if we have also a laboring people burdened and debt-bearing, and an agricultural population that must struggle continually against adverse circumstances, artificially created? Such a condition or the figures which represent the favored side of it, do not stand for a free nation's prosperity. These things are expected in a monarchy where nobility and caste are acknowledged distinctions, and utter selfishness and autocracy on one part and servility on the other are established and hereditary conditions. It doesn't mean prosperity for America, the land of boasted fraternity and equality.

The high-tax advocates who sneer at Mr. Schoenhof because he dares to study the question in all its phases and publish the facts and give conclusions, are nervously anxious to have the campaign of education draw to a close. To sneer at an honest student as "a foreign person named So-and-so" is not to refute his argument. And to proclaim that equal rights' advocates assert that such-and-such articles cannot be manufactured in this country is to knowingly falsify. It is not said that anything and everything known in the world cannot be made and grown here; but it is most strenuously denied that it is good judgment to grind the people to the earth with taxation to accomplish it. That is the question at issue, and the one which the opponents of tariff reform purposely evade.

THE NEGRO PROBLEM.

If there is any one English man of letters capable of writing reviews of the political questions of this country, that man is Professor James Bryce, M. P., author of "The American Commonwealth." Not only does he show close study and unprejudiced treatment of his subject, but his deductions and conclusions are logical, unimpassioned and worthy consideration.

Prof. Bryce contributes the opening paper to the December number of the North American Review, on the "Negro Problem" (in the United States). His preliminary proposition is that the labor question, the suffrage granted ignorant foreigners and the power they hold by virtue of it, and the future of the Negro are the three paramount issues before the people of the United States, and he questions if the greater of these is not the one last mentioned. He disarms criticism in the beginning by acknowledging that "the problem is a large and complicated one, and while he may know far less of the details of the subject than well-informed Americans know, he has the advantage of being free from sectional feeling or political prepossession."

Considering statistics: the entire population of the sixteen states in which slavery existed prior to the breaking out of the rebellion, together with Kansas and the District of Columbia, is now 23,875,259, of whom 16,868,305 are white and 6,996,166 are colored. In the Gulf States, with Arkansas and South Carolina, there are 4,519,005 colored against 6,139,295 white. In the three states, South Carolina, Mississippi and Louisiana the colored people are in a majority over the whites (2,002,116 against 1,552,869). The last census shows that the colored population are not holding their own with the whites in the matter of increase. In the sixteen states mentioned, the increase of whites in the last decade last decade was 24.67 per cent.; colored rate, 13.90 per cent. Census figures also show that the colored population are drifting from the higher and colder regions of the middle south into the semi-tropical region bordering upon the Gulf. Prof. Bryce visited the South and studied the problem in '83 and again in '90. He finds the negroes, while not making marked progress towards the accumulation of property, yet giving evidence of learning by slow degrees, the lessons of thrift and self-control. And what wonder, he says, when it is remembered that the importation of African savages as slaves was not forbidden until 1808. And that they were the descendants of these savages, and slaves, up to a quarter of a century ago. Freedom has done more for them in this time than one had right to expect and the best evidence of advancement is that they have begun to help themselves.

The writer observes no obliteration of the color line in the least degree, and approves the instinctive antagonism to miscegenation. The educated and well-to-do whites of the south are more helpfully friendly to the blacks than are the "poor white trash," as this class was contemptuously termed by well-conditioned slaves in ante-bellum days. These come in conflict with the blacks in the labor field. Having not the prestige of property they can assert their superiority in no other way than by a lofty sort of disdain of Sambo and his family. It is not hostility exactly, but "a strong feeling of separation."

Of the Negro as a political factor, it is said, where he is safely in the minority he is allowed to exercise the right of suffrage with the same freedom as his white neighbor. Where he is in the majority, the southerner declares, "for the good of the state to which we owe allegiance, we must vote him." And that it is much better for interested home politicians to attend to him than that the disorganizing and destructive rule of the "carpet-bag" days or anything resembling it shall be reinstated. In effect, the argument is that somebody will "vote the Negro" and we who are interested in the welfare of the commonwealth to which he belongs would better do it. Going back of the present condition of the problem, Prof. Bryce says what every candid, unprejudiced observer has said since the measure was accomplished—the mistake was made in the unconditional grant of such power to an utterly unprepared people; "school children ten years of age are better qualified than they were, or are. * * No application of the right of suffrage was ever so extreme." It is scarcely more than a hundred years since the Negro was transported, a savage from the wilds of Africa, and only twenty-five years since he was a free man and taught to read his letters and write his name, yet what a mighty power is thrust into his hands. Another feature of the situation not so often noted is the fact that the Negro doesn't value the suffrage, and great numbers of them would not trouble themselves to exercise it except for consideration or by compulsion. The "Guinea Coast blacks" are too sluggish and indolent to understand or care what it signifies. Property and educational qualifications for voters are the only remedy the reviewer sees for the complicated trouble, and such amendment is attended with difficulty, and what would seem to poor and illiterate whites who would be caught by the enactment, great injustice and oppression.

How shall the problem be worked out? Social equality and intermarriage is less urged and more strongly objected to, if possible, than in years before. To permit a law to remain on the statute book to be yearly violated, and against which violation northern men who live in the south and those who have money-eyed interests there have no protest to make, is to weaken constitutional law and obligation, and to menace the strength of democracy. To repeal it in some form must then be the thought, but can this be done? The Negro will not go out of the country; even those whose complaint is most bitter could not be induced to emigrate. It is their native land and with all the adverse fates against them they are happier and better conditioned than they could be elsewhere. All the evils that would follow, were the government to attempt to supervise the elections as the Lodge bill designed are enumerated.

Looking over the whole ground and weighing all the difficulties in honest balances, the only remedy Mr. Bryce can suggest for a constitutional law which is continually broken because it was enacted in hasty unreason, is a partial repeal of it by the manner aforesaid—an educational qualification. The general advancement and prosperity in the south will aid the Negro as well as his white neighbor, and except such legislation by the several states where the most formidable difficulties are presented can be effected, the conclusion arrived at is, as the south develops, the problem will gradually work out its own solution, and perhaps with less injustice to those involved than if stern and revolutionary measures were adopted.

These are the leading thoughts in the Professor's well-considered paper. There is nothing new, no additional light on the subject, but the position of those who have written and said the same things is strengthened by so careful and consistent a presentation of the different phases of the subject, by so thorough a student of American politics.

It is indeed a complicated problem, and they who live next door to Sambo and who share with him the good or ill that comes to the commonwealth, are they who, with the aid of the Negro himself, must work it out. It requires time and Christian patience; political spite and intrigue or federal bayonets cannot aid in its solution.

DIVIDED RANKS.

The two most prominent organizations of women in Ohio, the suffrage societies and the Christian Temperance unions, have begun the circulation of petitions demanding school suffrage for women in this state, and which it is intended shall be presented to the general assembly which convenes in January. The petition asks the passage of "all laws necessary to enable the women of the state, having the same qualifications as male voters except as to sex, to vote, or be voted for, at any election held for the purpose of choosing any officers of schools under the laws of the state."

It was believed when the state bodies representing these two organizations formulated this petition and urged its circulation that the movement would have the universal indorsement of women, and that the number of signatures secured would be so many as to force action upon our Columbus solons.

Whether this belief will be verified remains to be seen. Here in Toledo at least it is found that many women who have an active and intelligent interest in our schools object to signing the petition, for the reason that the suffrage asked for is not limited by some property or educational qualification. It is equally certain that, were there such a restriction upon the suffrage asked for, an equal or greater number of women would decline to sign the petition because of the restriction.

This discloses the real stumbling block in the way of universal suffrage, that women are not a unit in demanding it. The burden of almost all equal suffrage argument is that taxation without representation is unjust, but if universal suffrage is ever granted it will be upon more general grounds than this, and upon petitions in which women unite who do not pay taxes, having nothing to tax. The vast army of wage and salary earning women are not appealed to in the equal suffrage arguments, though without question they are the most interested in equal suffrage.

The action of the Ohio W. C. T. U. in demanding that the name of God be inserted in the constitution, the Bible (presumably the Protestant version) be placed in the public schools, the world's fair and similar places be closed on Sunday, may fairly be taken as an indication of the line of legislation they would seek to enact had they the power of the ballot. It is equally fair to assume, for such is probably the fact, that the vast body of women outside of that organization would be prepared to oppose such legislation, and do not favor the granting of suffrage which would result in the attempt to enact it.

There are twenty-two states in the union where school suffrage is granted to women. When Ohio is added to that number it will be after the majority of the women of the state are in dead earnest in demanding it. As for universal suffrage, the assertion that men unjustly withhold it from women cannot be demonstrated to be true until it is first shown that the majority of women really want it. Which has never yet been shown.

In consequence of Judge Jackson's decision in the Cleveland illuminating gas case, the trial of which involved the question of municipal right of regulating the price of gas of consumers, there is growing sentiment in favor of municipal construction and ownership of another gas plant in that city. Perhaps such a move would be profitable for Cleveland, and perhaps not; the preponderance of opinion is with the negative side of the question. The city would better think many times before acting hastily or rashly in the matter of expending several millions of dollars to "get even" with the private company, conceding in advance that the company is a soulless corporation.

That sleighing was good on the back streets yesterday, and the steppers were numerous.

That church choirs are on the hunt for new Christmas music, and will get to work at practice at once.

That hunters must be lively at shooting quail, as the season closes promptly on the 15th of December.

That there will be more changes in bank officials at next elections than has been the case for some years.

That Collector Waldorf did a little senatorial hunting while absent last week, ostensibly on a visit to Lima.

That Auditor Walker has several bond issues he desires to dispose of, and will add to that number to-night.

That people can see no good reason for railroad officials closing their mouths like clams when an accident occurs.

That the railroad accident of Saturday is the first one of importance that has occurred in Toledo for many years.

That a good many people of the city will not be disappointed if they have half-cooked or cold food for the next few days.

That the exchange of pulpits by Toledo pastors is a step in the right direction, and should come into more general practice.

That the good offices of Toledo's hospitals and ambulances were never more fully demonstrated than by the wreck Saturday night.

That men have a habit of occupying the rear platform of the street cars, which makes it very disagreeable and trying for a lady to either leave or enter a car.

That Bill Kirkby's candidacy for railroad commissioner, mentioned in the Bee on Friday, is receiving warm commendation at the hands of the state's newspapers.

ABOUT PEOPLE.

Capt. Wood, of Poughkeepsie, and his four stalwart sons have rescued over 100 persons from drowning in the North river.

Gen. E. Kirby Smith leaves his university chair in the Tennessee mountains to mix now and then with his old friends at Nashville.

One of the notable characters in the City of Mexico is Gen. Agramonte, who served on Hooker's staff during the greater part of the war.

Justice Bradley of the United States supreme court, has established a prize in Roman law at Rutgers College, of which he is a graduate.

Lewis Carroll, author of "Alice in Wonderland," is a senior in Christ Church college, Oxford, where for some years he was a mathematical lecturer.

Sir Frederick Leighton has consented to act as chairman of the fine arts section of the Royal Commission of the Society of Arts for the Chicago Exhibition.

The fine house which Mrs. Chandler, widow of the Michigan senator, has built in Washington will be one of the show places of the capital. It has cost $150,000 exclusive of decorations.

The wife of the new senator from Maryland, Mrs. Gibson, is said to be a very winning society woman. She was a great belle in Richmond before her first marriage. Mr. Gibson is her second husband.

Few members of the ruling families in Germany were so beloved as the Princess Ida Reuss, of the older line, who died a few weeks ago, at the age of 39. Throughout the country she was looked upon as an ideal Teutonic woman.

Lord Randolph Churchill, who is in excellent health, will, according to present arrangements, leave Mashonaland on his homeward journey within the next few days. His lordship is expected to reach London in the third week in December.

A London society journal says that the engagement of Col. Ralph Vivian to Mrs. Marshall O. Roberts is the sensation of the hour in England. Col. Vivian was in the Scots Guards until quite lately, and his fine, tall presence is as well known in fashionable haunts as that of any man in London of his age and time.

La Marechale Booth-Clibborn is one of the right sort of women to carry out the good work which she has in hand, and infuses more magnetism and vitality into the Salvation Army than any other leader. She is thoroughly earnest and energetic in all her work and has a persuasive eloquence which few female orators possess.

Mary Rigge and Julia Bechriger, two young Kentuckians, have lately graduated from a western technical school, and are experts with carpenter's tools, as well as skilled manipulators of all kinds of steam machinery. They are to do their first work on the woman's building of the exposition.

Lecky, the historian, was not suspected of being a poet, but it seems that he has courted the muse. His volume of poems just published by the Appletons will be read by many who are familiar with his histories in order that they may see how the gods have endowed him with the gifts of poesy. Evidently the author thinks the poems are of some worth, for on the first page may be found these words: "To my wife these poems, written in many moods, are dedicated."

Sir Edwin Arnold was entertained by the New York Press club the other night, and in some remarks made in response to a toast in his honor he told a story to illustrate the enterprise of the British journalists of today. There was a reception at Marlborough House and Sir Francis Knollys stepped up to the Prince of Wales and informed his royal highness that there were some gentlemen of the press outside who desired admission. "Show them in," said the prince, "for if they don't come in at the door they will come in at the ventilator."

FOSTER AND M'KINLEY.

Secretary Foster has not yet fully recovered from the bad cold he caught at the chamber of commerce dinner in New York, where his remarks on silver spread such a chill over the meeting that it struck in.—Boston Herald.

Mr. McKinley is now feeling melancholy because he allowed elephants to go on the free list. A California man is about to start an elephant ranch on the Pacific coast, and will presently be howling for protection.—Courier-Journal.

Secretary Foster's threatened illness seems to be in the nature of nervous prostration from overwork and worry, and it is the natural result of giving a man a large number of big bills to pay and an insufficient supply of money to pay them with, and leaving him to work through the straits as best he can.—Providence Journal.

Maj. McKinley, in his speech in Boston last week, improved his reputation as an orator. We cannot say as much for his reputation as a careful student of history, or a candid presenter of the facts that history affords, or of the lessons that history teaches. In all these respects it was essentially injured.—Boston Herald.

The Statistics Don't Fit.

It is not of much use to tell the operatives in the woollen mills of New England or the workmen who have recently lost their position in the iron and steel working establishments of this section that the per capita wealth of the country has increased perceptibly during the last ten years of high duties.—Providence Journal.

Ipse Dixit.

Neither President Harrison nor his treasury secretary is expected to say anything to congress about silver. While the people are curious to hear from the administration on this subject, it is a matter of really no moment. The next president of the United States has spoken; that is enough.—Kansas City Star.

An "Odorous" Comparison.

The New York poets who are writing sweet poems about climbing "sumac trees" to get the "red cones" for "Sweet Maud" are respectfully but firmly invited to come off. They are no more successful as poets of nature than Dr. Charles Ankylometic Dana is a democrat.—St. Louis Republic.

Donnelly Loquitor.

Dismiss your apprehensions, pseudo bard,
For no one wishes to disturb these stones,
Nor cares if here or in the outer yard
They stow your impudent deceitful bones.

Your foolish-colored bust upon the wall,
With its preposterous expanse of brow,
Shall rival Humpty-Dumpty's famous fall,
And cheats no cultured Boston people now.

Steal deer, hold horses, act your third-rate parts,
Hoard money, booze, neglect Anne Hathaway—
You can't deceive us with your stolen arts:
Like many a worthier dog, you've had your day.

I have expressed your history in a cypher,
I've done your sum for all ensuing time,
I don't know what you longer wish to lie for
Beneath these stones or in your doggerel rhyme.

Get up and dust, or plunge into the river,
Or walk the chancel with a ghostly squeak,
You were an ignorant and evil liver,
Who could not spell nor write nor knew much Greek.

Though you enslave the ages by your spell,
And Fame has blown no reputation louder,
Your cake is dough, for I by sifting well
Have quite reduced your dust to Bacon-powder.

MEANS A THIRD PARTY.

U. S. Hall on the Indianapolis Meeting.

National Alliance Playing Into False Hands.

The Anti-Sub-Treasury Leader Talks Freely on Affairs as They Relate to the Interests of the Tillers of the Soil.

St. Louis, Nov. 29.—Mr. U. S. Hall was recently interviewed. Mr. Hall is the exponent of the anti-subtreasury wing of the Farmers' alliance, and is universally recognized as one of the foremost men in the order. He was instrumental in having the anti-subtreasury convention called, which met at Fort Worth, Tex., and drew the division line. It has been said of Mr. Hall that the dying request of his father was that he devote his life to protecting and improving the condition of the tillers of the soil. In an interview Mr. Hall was asked:

"What will be the result of the Indianapolis meeting of the national alliance relative to a third party?"

He replied: "I think it will result in a third party, as it was always intended by McCune, Polk and the other national alliance officers that it should."

"Why do you think that McCune, Polk and his crowd have always intended to make a feeder to a third party out of the alliance?"

"Because they have put forward the sub-treasury and land-loan schemes and demanded the existing political parties to come in and adopt them, a thing that no political party with any sound idea of political economy would adopt. Nor do I think the worst feature of this advocacy of the subtreasury and land-loan schemes is that they are desirous of forming a third party. What I, as a farmer and an alliance man, most condemn and deprecate in their advocacy of these heresies is that they are acting as helpers to the protective tariff men of the United States, and are playing directly into their hands—first, by declaring, as they do, that there is nothing in the tariff issue; and, secondly, by urging these paternal heresies entirely in the southern states that have heretofore been the bitterest enemies of protection."

"Do you think the subtreasury, land-loan or similar schemes can live either with or without the third party?"

"No. Whenever the sunlight of a vigorous political canvass is turned upon these plants, which were sprouted in demagogery, watered by fanatics and cultivated in a secret, dark-lantern, oath-bound caucus, they will soon parch up, wither and die."

"What effect do you think the Indianapolis meeting will have on the Farmers' alliance proper?"

"This question, to be answered in full, would require more time than I now care to devote to the matter. But I will cut it short by saying it will injure the order."

"Do you still think there is need for the Farmers' alliance?"

"Most certainly and emphatically yes. And this division over these subtreasury and land-loan schemes only emphasizes the importance of the farmers meeting and educating ourselves for these most potent reasons: First, to unite us in the exercise of our voting right in our own and our country's interest; second, to guard against the encroachments of the national government on one side; and, third, to guard us against the intrigues and heresies of demagogues on the other side."

"In the event that the third-party movement goes so far as to nominate a presidential ticket, what do you think will be the position of the alliance as between the people's and democratic parties?"

"Unless the heresies of the people's party are thoroughly exposed by fearless newspapers and orators it will do what the advocates of the subtreasury and land-loan schemers have always hoped that it would do, and that is to injure the democratic party."

"You have been mixing with and talking to the people a great deal in Missouri lately, have you not?"

"I have."

"Have you heard much expression in this state on the subject of the pending speakership?"

"Oh, yes, this is to-day the greatest subject of interest in Missouri."

"How do you find the expression in this state?"

"Our people are for our own home man, Hon. W. H. Hatch, first, and we believe he would make a most excellent speaker, and it would be a recognition of the interests of the farmers of the United States, whose interests the dominant political party has never regarded."

"With Mr. Hatch out of the race how would the people of Missouri stand as between Mills and Crisp?"

"In my opinion, if that question were submitted to a popular vote in Missouri, Mills would receive 99 out of every 100 votes."

ACCOMPLISHED MUCH GOOD.

Work of the Canal Commission Reviewed.

Many Acres Placed to the Credit of the State—Thousands in Water Leases.

Columbus, Nov. 30.—Few people have any idea of the extent and importance of the work of the state canal commission since it was organized in April, 1888. Many thousands of acres of land belonging to the state but occupied and sold repeatedly by squatters have been recovered by the commission, thus putting a vast amount of money into the treasury that otherwise would have been a total loss.

Another important feature of the commission's work has been a recovery of all the state's water ways and the preparation of maps showing just what belongs to the state and what does not, along the canal banks.

In many instances the commission found that tracts of land of several hundred acres lying along the canal banks had been squatted upon by several generations. It was frequently very difficult to establish the state's claim, as the records in the state house were incomplete and had been kept in a hap-hazard way.

Several times it has occurred that the documents relating the terms of sale, or the deed itself, to some tract of land in dispute have been found in the cellar of the state house among a lot of debris.

The commission has labored indefatigably, however, and the results have been more gratifying than was ever anticipated by those who were instrumental in establishing this department.

Since its organization the commission has recovered and leased land valued at $83,912. Applications for leases on land valued at $167,250 have been received. Suits have been instituted to recover $130,200 worth of land. The money turned into the state treasury by the commission amounts to $50,000.

The total expense of the commission since its organization is 48,000. This amount includes all the salaries paid to the members of the commission and the 15 men who have been employed as draftsman and engineers.

The survey of the following canals and their adjuncts have been completed: Ohio canal, Miami and Erie, Walhonding, Sidney feeder, Auglaize county dry-feeder, St. Mary's feeder, Dresden side-cut, Bolivar feeder, Dayton, Norfolk feeder, Trenton feeder, and the 12 miles of canal in Columbus.

The commission has surveyed and platted 6,000 acres of swamp land. It will complete its work within the next year.

SOUGHT RELIEF IN DEATH.

Another Berlin Failure and Suicide.

Berlin, Nov. 30.—There was another sensational suicide and failure to-day, added to the long list of troubles growing out of the bankruptcy of Friedlander & Sommerfeld.

In this case, it is Herr Paarmann Cohn, proprietor of a wholesale watch-making establishment who has committed suicide. Herr Cohn shot and killed himself with a revolver, leaving a statement that his death was caused by heavy losses he had suffered through the failure of Friedlander & Sommerfeld.

AFTER THE SPOILS.

East Liverpool, Nov. 30.—Notwithstanding the republicans of Columbiana county permitted McKinley to run 235 behind his ticket, they manifest a willingness, if not an anxiety, to fill all the offices at his disposal. The latest additions to the list of aspirants are Edward Whitacre and ex-Sheriff Hostetter, of New Lisbon, both of whom want to be warden of the penitentiary.

GLASS WORKS ATTACHED.

Findlay, Nov. 30.—Late Saturday night an order of attachment was issued on the petition of the City bank of Findlay against the Hancock Flint Bottle company to satisfy a claim of $7,000, and the sheriff will close the works to-morrow. This is the glass factory which went into the hands of a receiver last Thursday.

FOUND A WATERY GRAVE.

Nearly Three Hundred People Reported Drowned.

The Big Brig Tahiti Found Floating, Bottom Up, on the Ocean—Her Human Cargo Probably Lost.

San Francisco, Nov. 30.—A dispatch from Manzanillo, Mexico, says the American steamer Roseville has arrived there and reports passing a wreck—that of the brig Tahiti—at sea.

She was floating bottom up, and the captain says she must have been capsized.

The Tahiti created a sensation September 30 last by putting into Drake's bay in distress. She had 270 Gilbert islanders on board under contract for work in Mexico at starvation wages.

These men were practically slaves, and there was much talk of seizing the vessel. It seems almost certain that all on board have been lost.

The wreck must have happened at least a month ago. Besides the islanders, there were the vessel's officers and a crew of twenty men, making a total of 291 on board the ill-fated craft.

FIGHTING FOR THEIR LIVES.

Battle with Flames on a Lake Tug.

Four Chicago Tugmen Rescued Barely in Time to Save Them from Death.

Chicago, Nov. 30.—For over an hour Sunday out on wintry Lake Michigan four men stared full in the face what seemed to be inevitable death.

They were aboard the tug John A. Miller, which, wrapped in flames, was running wild at full speed in a great circle. The men had only deck buckets to delay the moment when apparently they would have to decide whether to burn or drown.

The smoke and flame from the burning craft were sighted by the tug Welcome but the waves were running so high that the Welcome was long delayed.

At last, however, she succeeded in steaming close to the fiery Miller, and by almost superhuman exertions took aboard the scorched and exhausted seamen. The rescuers narrowly avoided meeting the fate that had awaited the rescued.

The Welcome took fire and only prompt measures averted her destruction. The four men who escaped from the Miller were Captain Peter Barry, Engineer James Barry, Fireman Charles Newman and a deck hand.

The Welcome was under command of Captain Thomas Barry, a brother of the Miller's captain. The crew of the Miller, though suffering intense pain, enjoyed one satisfaction—that of seeing the tug sink without them aboard.

The fire is supposed to have originated in the explosion of a lamp. It made too rapid progress to permit any investigation, and drove the engineer and wheelman from their posts.

CAN PAY ITS DEBTS.

Boston, Nov. 30.—When the announcement was made that the Suffolk Trust company would close its doors, officials of the institution made the statement that depositors would not suffer; that with but $162,000 of deposits there were $100,000 cash on hand and over $60,000 of quick assets.

POSTAL AFFAIRS.

Interesting Discussions Held in Washington.

Obscene Literature Receives Some Attention—Much Alleged Matter Goes Through the Mails.

Washington, Nov. 30.—Several topics of general interest have been discussed at the meetings of postoffice inspectors in this city, among them the re-classification of mails, involving the circulation of what the inspectors call "flash literature," which now passes as second class matter.

According to the report of the committee in charge of this topic, there is a large amount of English re-prints and French productions now passing through the mails that comes clearly within the scope of the law prohibiting the mailing of obscene literature.

The committee in its report suggested that publications of this class be prohibited from the mails because they debauch the minds and morals of youth.

Th inspectors also discussed one-cent postage and will recommend the reduction of postage on first class matter.

The subject of postoffice robberies and letter box depredations comes particularly within the province of the inspectors. Besides suggesting other means of legislation, a recommendation will be made calling for a detail of men especially adapted to criminal work. They will also recommend that the local authorities be allowed to offer in their discretion rewards for the apprehension of criminals.

LABOR LEADER DEAD.

East Liverpool, Nov. 30.—Henry J. Leyden, president of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters and a labor leader of extended note and influence, died at his home in this city at the age of 34 years. He was active in political affairs and had been a candidate for clerk of the courts on the democratic ticket.

A horse and cutter was stolen from Mr. Cone last Saturday evening while hitched on the street in Sylvania. Twenty-five dollars reward offered. See ad.

A CANTON COLLECTOR SHORT.

Canton, Nov. 30.—Dayton F. Coyle, who has been employed as collector for M. E. Lehman, cigar manufacturer, has skipped out. Mr. Lehman would like to learn of his whereabouts, as he would prefer a charge of embezzlement against him. The amount of his shortage is unknown.

How's Your Liver?

Is the Oriental salutation, knowing that good health cannot exist without a healthy Liver. When the Liver is torpid the Bowels are sluggish and constipated, the food lies in the stomach undigested, poisoning the blood; frequent headache ensues; a feeling of lassitude, despondency and nervousness indicate how the whole system is deranged. Simmons Liver Regulator has been the means of restoring more people to health and happiness by giving them a healthy Liver than any agency known on earth. It acts with extraordinary power and efficacy.

NEVER BEEN DISAPPOINTED.

As a general family remedy for dyspepsia, Torpid Liver, Constipation, etc., I hardly ever see anything else, and have never been disappointed in the effect produced; it seems to be almost a perfect cure for all diseases of the Stomach and Bowels.

Pettingill & Co. Are Now in New Quarters.

Remarkable History of This Famous Advertising Agency—Many Encomiums from Life-Long Customers of the Firm.

The art of advertising—for advertising must now be classed as such—has undergone such a wonderful development in the past decade that it forms one of the most interesting of studies, as well as a most necessary adjunct of modern business life. A conspicuous illustration of this fact is found in the daily newspapers of the period, whose columns, in many cases, have been increased in a hundred per cent. during that time as a result of the now universally recognized truth that it pays to tell people what you have to sell or exchange, provided you exercise proper judgment and discretion as to the manner in which you do it. An even more striking illustration of this can be found in Boston to-day in the new and magnificent quarters that have just been occupied at 22 School street by one of the best known advertising agencies in the country—Pettingill & Co. In the day when newspaper advertising was in its infancy (and that day was contemporaneous with the foundation of this firm), such an advance as has since been made in this now immensely important department was never dreamed of. But the advance has been made, however, and this new establishment of the pioneer advertising firm of Boston is one of its most conspicuous proofs. In 1849 S. M. Pettengill, then a humble clerk, came to Boston from New York and became associated in an advertising agency with V. P. Palmer, who was the original advertising agent of the Hub. He left him after a while and started in business for himself, afterward going to New York and leaving the business in charge of U. L. Pettingill, father of the present senior of the firm. The office was then located at 10 State street, where it remained up to the present removal of the firm. This removal was found compulsory on account of the rapidly increasing business of the firm. During the past 18 months, in particular, it is no exaggeration to say that the volume of business has actually doubled, and while its leading advertisers have been growing wealthy and famous, as a result of the advertising they have done, the firm itself has been rapidly outgrowing the limits of its old quarters, on account of the large number who have been induced to follow the example of these same wealthy and famous advertisers just mentioned. Seeing is believing in this case at any rate.

The new offices of the firm are located in the second floor of a building that has been closely associated with newspaper history in the past. A more appropriate location could hardly have been selected. It was here that the now famous and prosperous Youth's Companion, was first printed, even before its present well-known proprietor had purchased it, and when it had achieved only 5,000 of its present 450,000 circulation. Here also was formerly published the New England Farmer, the True Flag, the Reflector, the Watchman, and 15 or 20 other well-known papers. Where 20 were published between 1849 and 1863, however, thousands are to be found on file to-day. It is truly a remarkable collection of current history that is to be seen in this new and attractive office, as busy and hustling almost as the publication office of a newspaper itself.

As you enter the door you find yourself confronted with a spacious and well-lighted room, finished in a rich and cheerful shade of oak and filled with desks, at which busy clerks and accountants sit at work. The windows are large and nicely curtained, and in one end of the room are the two private offices of the members of the firm, the floors covered with inviting carpets, and a general air of light and cheerfulness pervading everything. It is an absolute pleasure to sit and do business in such surroundings. At the rear, and occupying a very large floor area, is the most interesting feature of all, the repository of the newspapers, daily, weekly and monthly, that are constantly being received at the agency and filed away just where they can be found at the moment wanted. The Bee's exchange list is a pretty large and representative one, but it is simply "not in it" in comparison with this one. The papers are arranged in a series of numbered receptacles or pigeonholes, on each side of a number of alcoves, lighted by electricity, and at the end of several of these alcoves there are convenient sets of drawers for the preservation of cuts owned by customers. Behind these alcoves, which remind one of a public library, is located the receiving department, where the big sacks of newspapers are brought from the post-office and the different copies are unwrapped and unfolded. This work alone requires the services of several assistants.

Ascending a short flight of stairs from here, another room, occupied by a big table, is entered. At this table four or five "checkers" are at work sorting out the papers, and making a record of the advertisements placed therein by the agency in immense books as big as that of the judgment day. These "checkers" keep perpetual "tab" on every advertisement in which the agency is interested, whether it is placed in 20 or 500 papers, and whether it is to run for a week or a year. Some of the orders received are for more than five hundred papers. A complete record of the space, position and number of times published is kept of each insertion.

Beyond this department is another series of alcoves, and then comes an observation gallery from which a fine view of the main office can be obtained. Everything about the place is new and complete and interesting, and everybody interested in such things is cordially invited to come and make a personal inspection, just as they are of the Bee's big and busy building.

So completely in touch with modern progress is this firm that an intending advertiser doesn't even have to do any thing if he doesn't want to. His advertisement will be prepared in the most effective and economical manner by an expert in that work, illustrated by a special artist who works right on the spot and is full of original ideas (supposing it is to be illustrated) and placed just where it will be sure to bring the best results, by the agency itself. The firm has several customers whose annual bills for advertising foot up to over $100,000. One of them began 10 years ago by placing an annual contract amounting to $37.50, and had rather hard work to raise the amount in cash. Many of the largest concerns in the United States are on the list. Here is what some of them say of their experience:

Messrs. Chase & Sanborn, importers of teas and coffees, 85 and 87 Broad street, Boston, Mass., write as follows:

Boston, Oct. 15, 1891.

We are large advertisers, and have placed contracts at different times during the last 10 years with prominent advertising agencies in New York and Boston, with a view of convincing ourselves from whom we received the best service, and, by a fair competitive test, Messrs. Pettingill & Co. have certainly earned our business. They are something more than messenger boys, carrying the written manuscript from the originator to the newspaper, or advisors as to where to place an advertisement. They furnish brains, original ideas and really relieve the advertiser of all mental work, with the exception of stating the business facts.

Our brightest and best newspaper and magazine advertising has been entirely originated and executed by them, and whatever success we have had in the advertising field is due almost entirely to the personal attention, suggestions and work of Messrs. Pettingill & Co.

Respectfully yours,
(Signed) CHASE & SANBORN.
(Copy of letter.)

Oak Hall, Boston, Oct. 19, 1891.

We are very frequently asked, "Whom do you consider the best advertising agents?" Our answer is, "Our business relations, with Pettingill & Co. cover 20 years' time." We think this fact speaks for itself. Yours very truly,

G. W. SIMMONS & CO.

The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine company of Lynn, Mass., writes as follows:

Lynn, Mass., Oct. 13, 1891.

Messrs Pettingill & Co. have demonstrated to us that they are peerless in their line of business; they have in a little more than one year promoted the welfare of our business far beyond our most sanguine expectations; in fact, we have so much faith in their judgment and methods that we have invested them with standing authority to expend a very large amount of money in advertising in such a manner as it seems in their judgment best for our interests, and a glance at the large increase of sales recorded on our order books during the past year will fully justify our confidence in them.

Success is what we are all after, and we are free to say that our advertising has been eminently successful under the management of Messrs. Pettingill & Co.

My advice to any one is to deal with a house whose reliability is beyond question, and whose judgments are based upon years of actual experience.

(Signed) CHARLES H. PINKHAM.
President of Lydia E. Pinkham Med. Co.
(Copy of letter.)

Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple place, Boston, Mass., and 35 West Fourteenth street, New York, writes as follows:

For many years the firm of Pettingill & Co. has had entire charge of the placing of the advertising of my remedy, Dr. Greene's Nervura.

Their uniform courtesy, the great interest invariably manifested in assuring the success of all advertising intrusted to their care, their high and excellent standing with the papers throughout the United States, are a few of the attributes of this great advertising house.

The members of the firm are bright and able advertisers, with minds alert to every advantageous point to be gained in advertising, quick and accurate in their judgment as to the profitable or non-profitable qualities of advertisements, and original and fertile in advertising expedients.

Above all, they are men of great energy and push, and therefore, with their accuracy of judgment, just the advisers for those who desire to extend their business by judicious and effective advertising.

Yours truly,
F. E. & J. A. GREENE.

A New York branch is maintained at No. 71 Tribune building. The firm of Pettingill & Co. consists of Ubert K. Pettingill and James T. Wetherald, two very genial and wide-awake gentlemen. They are prepared to place advertisements of any nature in any paper in the United States or Canada, and furnish advice to any who may desire it. Their remarkable success in the past gives them every confidence in the future. They believe thoroughly in what they themselves preach, and can point to hundreds of instances where judicious advertising has brought absolute wealth to the advertiser, and that quickly. "Try 10 per cent. of last year's profits in newspaper advertising," is their favorite motto. It is a perfectly safe one, too, and one that the Bee itself can cheerfully indorse.

ENTERTAINMENTS.

The Bostonians at Wheeler's To-Night—The Still Alarm.

The Bostonians will present the delightful opera, Robin Hood, at the Wheeler opera house to-night. The New York Recorder has the following to say of them:

The Bostonians have made a hit. They came to this city without any flare of trumpets, opened at the Standard theater in the opera of Robin Hood, and were greeted on the first night by a large audience. The next morning, New York woke up to the fact that there was an opera company in town—and such a company! Nothing like it had been heard for years. The music of Robin Hood is bright, catchy and sparkling. Karl, MacDonald and Barnabee, the proprietors, have done something which New York thought they never could do. They have made a success in the most critical city in the world, and the wild scramble for seats to hear their production is the best possible evidence that can possibly be had of it. There is a continual line at the box office and nothing is talked of in town but the grand production and the grand way it is being sung. Society has turned out en masse. The Standard theater is crowded to the doors nightly, the "standing room" sign has been nailed to the wall, and whenever the Bostonians return again they can renew their former reign of triumph.

The Still Alarm.

In these days of realism on the stage there is nothing which has caught the popular fancy so strongly as the now famous play, The Still Alarm, which will be at the People's this week, and the success is as widespread as it is deserved. The sensational episode of the steam fire engine and the real horses is of course a prominent feature of the performance, but the play itself possesses many elements to interest and amuse. The plot of Mr. Joseph Arthur's drama has the merit of novelty and character, and is well written. Of the many American plays that have been sent across the water none have achieved the success of The Still Alarm, and it is as popular in England as America. Although called on the bills a comedy drama, it is really of the melodramatic school, and there is no doubt of the popularity of this style of stage production. Two nations have applauded The Still Alarm, and have nightly gone wild in enthusiasm over the thrilling scenes and dramatic incidents in real life. Although this play has now been before the public for six seasons it seems to gain rather than lose in popularity; and of all of the attractions that visit this city none gives such genuine satisfaction as The Still Alarm. Additional interest will be lent to the play this year by the appearance of the two "Sacred Sun Horses," sent to Mr. Arthur by a friend in India.

Reaching Out for the Democratic Convention.

A General Belief That it Will Go West.

Many of the Hitherto Republican States of the Northwest Are Debatable and the Convention Might Lend Good Democratic Influences.

Washington, Nov. 30.—Will Minneapolis capture the democratic national convention as she captured the republican convention?

This was the intention of her hustling delegation when they departed westward, and the announcement has a disquieting effect upon the representatives of the other cities which purpose contending for the honor.

The democratic national committee will meet in this city on February 22. Each quadrennial assembling of the committee for several decades has fallen on that date, and it is not expected that any exception will be made this time.

To the democratic leaders, many of whom are already in Washington, the suggestion of sending the convention west is a very satisfactory one. They may be as divided in their personal preferences regarding the place to be selected as the republicans were, but there is no doubt that, like the republicans, the most of the committee regard the Middle West as the proper locality.

They reason thus: If there be any force in the republican argument that the republican convention ought to be held in that section to neutralize if possible the rapidly growing dissatisfaction with the party, why would it not be a good idea to send the democratic convention there with a view of offsetting whatever prestige the republicans may gain from it?

They have the assurance of such clever republicans as Editor Rosewater, of the Omaha Bee, that Nebraska, for example, is really debatable ground, and if that be true why should they not embrace every opportunity to make the state still more uncertain politically, especially if holding the convention there would contribute materially to that result?

Many of these gentlemen believe that the next democratic candidate will be taken from the west, and in this case it will be eminently fitting that the convention which nominates him should also be located there. Minneapolis will have two formidable rivals in her efforts to secure the democratic convention. The Cincinnatians feel very sore over their defeat, especially after the splendid show of strength they made, and they will return here in February to make if possible a stronger fight. They will hold their guarantee fund intact, and present the same facilities for entertaining the delegates that they presented to the republican committee.

The Omaha delegation will follow substantially the same program. San Francisco will be again a competitor, but the influences which defeated her hopes on Monday last will be no doubt equally potent when her claims for consideration are again presented. The truth is the distance to California is too great and the time consumed in going and coming is more than busy men can afford to lose.

The Californians appreciate this fact, and it is hardly probable that they will enter upon the next contest with any hopeful expectations.

New York is out of the fight even if she decided to enter upon it, of which at present there is no indication. There is a strong unanimity of feeling against locating any national convention in New York city, and especially a democratic convention.

To provincial cities like Cincinnati, San Francisco, Omaha and Minneapolis, a national convention means everything. To New York city it means nothing. The convention, with its attending crowds, would be swallowed up in that great human maelstrom, and its existence would be actually unknown, so far as any increase of population is concerned, a block away.

They have the authority of so distinguished an Idaho republican as Senator Frederick Dubois that the state will shift from her republican moorings if President Harrison shall veto a free coinage of silver bill next winter. Such action on his part, Senator Dubois asserts, would make the state overwhelmingly democratic in 1892.

"There is but one thing," he said, "that could save it to the republicans, and that would be the passage through the house this winter of a bill placing lead ore on the free list." Lead ore, Senator Dubois says, is a more overshadowing issue than silver, and any interference with the duty on that article would be fatal to the party that attempts it.

A CHICKEN AND CAT

Furnish Subjects for Stories Intended to Knock Out Gunckel's Yarns.

The railroads of the country afford news in immeasurable quantities to the press every day, but many interesting events are constantly occurring on and about these great steel thoroughfares that are never given to the public. While the more important occurrences have precedence on account of their worth to the news-hungry public, these minor incidents, though not news in a strict sense of the word, are instructive and entertaining at all times. There is not one railroad man out of ten who, if he so desired, could not relate many reminiscences of this nature, and when a number of them get together with an idle moment at their disposal, with the conversation in the right channel, the truth of this statement will manifest itself.

The other day John Gunckel was at the Union depot, and as usual stopped for a minute's conversation with Depot Master Clarke.

"John," said Mr. Clarke, "I had a little experience the other day that if published in the Bee would place you and Ten-Mile creek way back in the shade."

"Let us have it," said John.

"Well, sir, on Thanksgiving just before the morning express train on the Lake Shore left Detroit, a chicken managed to escape from the crate in the express car, and before it could be captured flew out of the door. Of course there was a general scramble on the part of newsboys and bootblacks at the depot to catch the feathered fugitive, but to no avail. In the very heat of the chase the fowl disappeared as mysteriously and completely as though the earth had opened up and swallowed it. The train left without the chicken. It arrived on time in Toledo, and the express messenger related the Detroit event to me, when one of the car inspectors called my attention to something beneath the express car. I stooped down and peered under, and as true as I live there sat that chicken perched on the brake-beam, as comfortable and contept as though it had never known any other roosting place."

While Mr. Clarke was talking several passenger conductors had drawn near and listened to the narrative.

"That reminds me of a somewhat similar experience I had not long ago," remarked a C., H. & D. conductor, when Mr. Clarke had finished. "The first stop we made out of Cincinnati my brakeman noticed a cat run out from under the train and nose around the station, looking as innocent as though she had been born and bred about the place. The brakeman thought nothing of this, as a cat is not an unusual sight on a depot platform. The train pulled out, and imagine that brakeman's surprise to see the identical cat run out from under the train as before and stroll about the platform like an old acquaintance. The brakeman called my attention to the occurrence, and before the train left we both forgot our unique tramp, but at the next station, which was Dayton, the cat was taking in the sights before we got out of the coach. By this time we were all pretty well mystified and curious to know how the cat traveled. The train moved up a little at Dayton, and that feline made a streak for the trucks of the baggage car, and took a seat on the brake beam as cool as you please.

"At Lima we got out and pulled the animal off its perch, and left the town satisfied that we had given our four-footed traveler the shake at last. Nothing was seen of it until we arrived at Toledo, when out popped that cat from the trucks of one of the rear coaches and scurried off through the crowd. Some of you fellows had taken that cat to Cincinnati to get rid of it, and as might have been expected it returned safe and sound."

MIDDLE BASS CLUB.

A Retrospect of the Growth of the Organization.

In looking back upon the growth of the Middle Bass club, or more properly speaking, the Toledo and Lake Erie Boating and Fishing association, there are those who remember how in 1873 seventeen gentlemen met at the Northern National bank, which was then located where the Wabash restaurant is now conducted on Summit street, between Jefferson and Madison. The object of the meeting was to organize a fishing club, and there were present Messrs. Mathew Shoemaker, Henry J. Chase, Stephen Standard, A. W. Colton, Cal Barker, Leander Burdick, Capt. William Standart, Al North, F. B. Shoemaker, Dr. Chesebro, John H. Doyle, E. O. Brown, Thomas Hamilton, J. E. Morehouse, Isaac Herman, W. C. Wiltbank and F. P. Isherwood. Mr. Mathew Shoemaker was chosen president, F. B. Shoemaker treasurer and F. P. Isherwood secretary.

A committee was also appointed to investigate the most available site for locating a resort of this nature, either on Middle Bass, or South Bass Island, the committee being composed of M. Shoemaker, Stephen Standard and H. J. Chase. At the next meeting the committee made the report, having visited three places—one at South Bass, where the owners wanted $3,000 for sufficient ground for location. Mr. F. L. Nichols, who owned some ground at Middle Bass, would sell a site for $1,500, and Wm. Rehberg offered to give the club three-quarters of an acre free of price, provided they would erect suitable buildings on that property adjoining his grounds. A vote was taken and it was found that three parties favored the South Bass locality, five were for Nichols' Point and eight for Rehberg's, the present location of the club house. The two first locations had eight votes, and eight for Rehberg's, consequently no majority, and the secretary not having voted, cast his vote for the Rehberg location, where the splendid buildings of the club are now.

At the present time there are but six members out of the seventeen that originally started the club who are members, namely: M. Shoemaker, F. B. Shoemaker, A. W. Colton, F. P. Isherwood, J. H. Doyle and L. Burdick. The following six have since died: H. J. Chase, Dr. Chesebro, Al. North, Capt. Standart, J. E. Morehouse and Isaac Herman. The following five have sold their memberships: Calvin Barker, E. O. Brown, Thomas Hamilton, Stephen Standard and W. C. Wiltbank. Mr. Mathew Shoemaker, who was elected the first president, has continued to hold that office until last October, when he resigned, much to the regret of the trustees. His successor will be elected at the next annual meeting January, as well as three trustees to serve for three years, and one to serve for two years, the balance of Mr. Shoemaker's term.

The club is composed of 200 members, the majority of whom are Toledoans, the balance being from all over the state, as well as outside cities. Memberships have continued to increase in value ever since the formation of the club, and are now held valued at $300. Some little idea of the growth of the club and the number of people it looks after each summer can be found from the fact that about $3,000 were paid out for meats last summer; some $900 for butter and over $4,000 for help.

HOUSEHOLD MARKETING.

Housekeepers in New York and Brooklyn find that tradesmen in two cities have begun to adopt the Parisian custom of paying commissions to maids that do the household marketing. The thing has hardened into law in Paris, and the housekeeper who attempts to do her own marketing finds the prices even higher than those charged to the maids. The custom in New York and Brooklyn first took the form of Christmas presents from butcher, baker and candlestick maker to their friends, the maids. No special secrecy was maintained, and now the grocers commission is a tacitly recognized matter in some households. It is not unusual to club stewards to stipulate for this privilege, and only the other day one of the largest New York clubs woke up to the fact that it had within a year lost nearly $12,000 through corrupt relations between steward and tradesmen. It was found that all sorts of articles were billed at prices far above the market rate, and the goods delivered when put to the test of the scales turned out to be sadly short in weight.

Wheat Quotations for the Day—Price Current for Produce and Other Articles

London wheat market rather easier; quotations 3 pence lower. Corn easy, steady. Country markets rather easier. Weather cool and wet. Liverpool wheat demand light; prices 1-2 pence lower. Corn 1d lower.

The receipts of wheat at seven principal western points to-day are 1,301,068 bu., compared with 816,100 bu. on the same day last year.

Wheat Stocks.—Toledo increased 4,834 bu.; New York increased 929,723 bu.

Bradstreet's Report of Exports.—Exports of wheat and flour from both coasts for the week are 4,082,000 bu, against 5,383,691 bu the previous week and 1,911,663 bu for the corresponding week last year. For 22 weeks the aggregate was 91,456,000 bu, against 41,479,692 bu for the corresponding time last year, and 42,524,513 bu for the same time in 1889.

The Chicago "Bulletin" says: The Italian minister of agriculture estimates that Italy will require to import 28,000,000 bu wheat for season of 1891-92.

The official order that the state canals close November 30 has been modified so that the Erie will remain open until December 5. This extension was brought about by the request of shippers and the chamber of commerce of Buffalo and New York, to enable the movement of some of the great accumulations of grain in Buffalo.

The New York Financial Chronicle says: For the second week in November the aggregate in our final statement embraces 88 roads, and the result is a gain of 10.06 per cent. over the corresponding week last year.

The United Kingdom's Supply of Breadstuffs.—According to the New York Produce Exchange Weekly, the supply of breadstuffs in the United Kingdom for the week ending Nov. 21 was 1,611,880 bushels in excess of estimated consumption, and the supply for eight weeks ending Nov. 7 was 7,322,650 bushels in excess of estimated consumption.

Gold From Sidney.—San Francisco, Nov. 28.—The steamer Mariposa brought from Sidney 550,000 pounds in gold, which together with the amounts brought by the four preceding steamers made a total of 1,425,000 pounds, equal to over $7,000,000 in American gold, all of which has gone into the local branch of the United States mint for recoinage.

Duluth Grain Shipments.—Grain rates. —This has been the banner week for wheat shipments from this market in the history of this port, both as regard to the rates obtained and the quantity of grain moved. Rates have ruled strong all week at 9 1-4 to 9 1-2c per bu., and the clearances have aggregated about 3,500,000 bu. of wheat with large shipments of flour.

Some coal continues to come at all sorts of rates, from free as ballast from Buffalo to $1.00 per ton on soft coal from Ohio ports.

Seed Market.

The receipts of this commodity at Toledo last week were 2,117 bags, shipments 2,800 bags. In the corresponding week in 1890 the receipts were 1,094 bags, shipments 1,339 bags. Our statement last week of receipts since September 1 was erroneous and we have corrected it. The receipts to November 28 inclusive were 36,794 bags and the shipments 16,669 bags. In 1890 the receipts were 37,470 bags and shipments 26,817 bags.

The exports from New York for the week ending November 21st, were 1,738 bags, and since September 1st to same date 21,499 bags, compared with 22,715 bags in the corresponding period in 1890.

Baltimore Seed—Clover seed is very firm at 9c, and 8 7-8c bid for choice; but although the market is very strong, it is quiet at the moment, as exporters are not able to get orders at the advance. Quote as follows: Choice new clover 8 3-8@9c per lb; prime, 7 1-2@7 3-4c; No. 2, nearby, 6 1-2@7c; timothy, prime, $1 23@1 35. Exports for the week ending November 27, 1891: Clover seed, 4,237 bu.; timothy, 838 bu.; flax, 29,901 bu. Receipts to-day, clover 900 bu.; timothy, 887 bu.

The receipts of wheat to-day at seven principal western points are 484,968 bu. in excess of the corresponding Monday in 1890.

The export clearances Saturday, at four Atlantic ports were 473,982 bu. of wheat and flour to an aggregate of 750,000 bu. The exports of corn were 96,743 bu. and of oats 219,405 bu.

English markets as reported herein are dull and lower for wheat and corn.

The Situation.

Dealers in wheat at the great markets seem to be more than usually rattled. It has been stated of late that the bears tired of losing money on the short side had shifted their position and were disposed to support the long side. But this world is full of disappointments and the wheat trade frequently holds out false lights. Her guides are blind, and her promises are not always kept, and prices are lower. As we stated last week, the continental buyers are fairly stocked, and the United Kingdom has accumulated quite largely in two months. Last Tuesday we gave the increase in ocean stock for the United Kingdom since September 14 at 9,600,000 bu. The supply of breadstuffs in the kingdom for nine weeks ending November 21 is given at 10,116,500 bu in excess of estimated consumption. Of course this will not last forever, but 20,000,000 of wheat makes the speculators quiet and indifferent, and makes a hazy atmosphere on this side in which it is a little more difficult to see ahead, and discovers signs of a bulge in prices. No markets want wheat as rapidly as we have been moving it. Later, when the stream from Russia and India is decreased we may expect more demand.

The wheat markets on this side all opened lower and at the decline were comparatively steady. Corn has also ruled dull and a shade lower.

In New York December wheat closed 3-4c lower. December corn 3-4c lower. December oats 5-8c higher.

In Chicago December wheat closed 7-8c and May 1-2c lower. December oats 1 3-4c higher. In Toledo the trading in wheat futures has been fairly active, without excitement or any new feature of importance to values. Opening prices were about 1c lower and this position was about maintained through the day, closing 7-8c on December and May below Saturday. On the call December sold at 95 3-4c to 95 1-2c. May at 81 03 1-4 to 81 03, closing at 1-8c. After the call December sold at 95 1-2c to 95 7-8s and closed at 95 5-8c. May sold at 81 03 to 81 03 1-4 and closed at 81 03 1-8. January sold at 97 1-2c and February at 98 1-4c.

Cash wheat was dull and not much inquired for, and closed 3-4c lower. No. 2 soft sold at 95 1-2 and closed at that. No. 3 soft at 92 1-2c. No. 4 soft at 86 1-2c. No. 1 white at 92c. No. 2 at 91 1-2c.

Corn—No. 2 at 48c. January, 43 1-2c. May, 44c. No. 4 at 45c to 44 1-2c. No. 3 yellow at 47c.

Oats—On the call May sold at 35 5-8c 36c. After the call at 36c.

Rye—No. 2 at 94 1-2c to 95c. No. 3 at 91 1-2c.

Clover seed was weak and lower; prime for cash at $5 15; December at $5 15 to $5 07 1-2; January at $5 15; February at $5 25 to $5 20; March at $5 30 to $5 27 1-2; No. 2 at $5 00.

The shipment of wheat from India last week equaled 800,000 bu.; previous week 740,000 bu. From April 1st, the beginning of the crop year, to November 28th, equal 41,938,000 bu.

The visible supply of wheat was increased last week 2,252,000 bu. Corn increased 676,000 bu. Oats decreased 508,000 bu. In the corresponding week in 1890 wheat increased 338,000 bu. Corn decreased 1,188,000 bu. Oats decreased 171,000 bu.

THE BOUNDARY LINE.

All Ohio and Indiana is Interested.

Prof. Mendenhall is Now in the Capital Consulting with Governor Campbell About the Matter.

Columbus, O., Nov. 30.—Professor T. C. Mendenhall, superintendent of the United States coast and geodetic survey, formerly of the state university, arrived in the city yesterday on an important mission.

His visit is made in response to a request from Governor Campbell and on his visit hinges the decision concerning the disputed boundary line between Ohio and Indiana.

When the matter came before Governor Campbell he referred it to Professor Mendenhall for investigation and the professor after spending considerable time in looking up the records, now comes to Ohio in search of additional facts bearing upon the case.

The archives of the Ohio Historical and Archaeological society will be consulted, and as soon as the location of certain monuments at the southern end of the disputed line can be ascertained Professor Mendenhall will make his report to the governor, and thus will some of the Hoosiers of the border territory find out whether they owe allegiance to Indiana or Ohio.

Notes and Comments on Incidents Occurring Daily—Prepared for Readers Who are Hustled for Time.

THEY ARE BURNING COAL

The water works are burning coal at the pumping station and have been doing so for a week. The gas trustees did not have gas to supply their private consumers, and the pumping station was cut off.

TWO NEW SEWERS.

Work was commenced to-day on sewer No. 374 in Peck street and the alley between Peck and Sherman street, from Lagrange street to Mulberry. Sewer 395 in Indiana avenue, from Junction avenue to the east line of Woodland addition, was also begun to-day.

CONSOLIDATED EXTENSIONS.

The county commissioners this morning granted the Consolidated Street Railway company permission to construct a single track in Central avenue from Auburndale avenue to the city limits in Washington township, also to erect poles and wires for electrical application.

After his trial last Saturday he was sent out of town, but returned and Saturday night was arrested again while in a drunken condition.

BIRTHDAY REMEMBRANCE.

Mr. Joachin Jarcow, of Cherry street, celebrated his fifty-first birthday Saturday, and in the evening a large number of his friends dropped in to help him commemorate the event. They also presented him with an elegant testimonial of their esteem in the shape of a handsome gold watch.

WILL TRY TO SELL BONDS.

The council committee on ways and means will meet this evening to receive bids for three lots of improvement bonds, as follows: Superior street, from Madison to Orange, $16,334.83; State street, from Spellbusch avenue to Canton avenue, $1,258.38; Lafayette street, from Erie street to Fifteenth street, $9,917.45.

FUGITIVE ARRESTED.

A man named Joseph Pruekler, who has been working as a paver in this city for some time, was arrested Saturday afternoon by Detective Carew on a telegram from Terre Haute, Ind., where he is wanted for obtaining money under false pretenses. Superintendent of Police Cornelius Meagher, of Terre Haute, arrived here yesterday and took Pruekler to that city with him.

SET THE VERDICT ASIDE.

The motions of new trial in the cases of Frederick Prentice and Alonzo Chesebrough against the Pennsylvania Railway company, were granted. The cases were tried jointly, as they both are actions to recover $10,000 damages to property by the appropriation of property over the river for railroad purposes. The jury returned a verdict for the company, which was set aside.

POLISH CELEBRATION.

The Poles of Toledo celebrated yesterday the sixty-first anniversary of the revolution in Poland, when another attempt was made to set Poland at liberty, and proclaim it a republic. The hall at St. Hedwigs parish was filled with patriotic Poles, and several speeches were made in the Polish language. Among the most prominent speakers were Fr. Dukowski and Ant. Szypevski.

BIDS OPENED.

Bids were opened at the city clerk's office to-day for paving the alley between St. Clair street and Summit street, from Adams to Oak streets, and for sewer No. 398 in Monroe street, from proposed sewer in Detroit avenue to south-east line of right of way of the L. S. & M. S. railway; and sewer No. 399 in Bancroft street, from center of Detroit avenue to a point 15 feet east of the easterly line of right of way of the L. S. & M. S. railway.

THE KETCHAM FARM.

Elsewhere appears the advertisement of the Ketcham farm, which is among the most complete as a stock farm to be found in the west. It consists of 863 acres, and the improvements made and to be made will add materially to its usefulness. Some of the finest horses in the country are included in the stock, the pedigree of which are second to none. Barounstein is the favorite for the season of 1892. Mr. George Ketcham will be pleased to give all inquiries prompt attention.

ALDERMANIC BUSINESS.

The board of aldermen meets this evening, but as no committee meetings were held last week the schedule is short. There are several important matters, however, among which are the ordinance granting to the Robisons the right to double track Lawrence avenue; the ordinance fixing the price of illuminating gas, which comes up for third reading; a resolution directing the city clerk to advertise for proposals for collecting garbage, and a resolution directing the city engineer to prepare plans for a bridge over Swan creek.

BRUTAL WIFE BEATER

Gets a Good Sentence in Police Court for His Misdeeds.

Adam Priebe, who was arrested Friday evening for pounding and cutting his wife last Wednesday and Friday, was tried in police court this morning on two charges of assault and battery. The case was a very aggravated one, the particulars of which were printed in Saturday's Bee and the evidence indicated that Priebe had made a determined effort to kill his wife.

He was found guilty on both charges, and for one was fined $50 and costs with a workhouse sentence of 60 days and for the other he was fined $25 and costs and 30 days.

THE RESULT OF MERIT.

When anything stands a test of fifty years among a discriminating people like the Americans, it is pretty good evidence that there is merit somewhere. The value of a medicine is best proved by its continued use from year to year by the same persons and families, as well as by a steady increasing sale. Few, if any, medicines have met with such continued success and popularity as has marked the introduction and progress of Brandreth's Pills, which, after a trial of over fifty years, are conceded to be the safest and most effective purgative and blood purifier introduced to the public.

That this is the result of merit, and that Brandreth's Pills actually perform all that is claimed for them, is conclusively proved by the fact that those who regard them with the greatest favor are those who have used them the longest.

Brandreth's Pills are sold in every drug and medicine store, either plain or sugar coated.

TOOK TO A TREE.

A Paulding County Bear that Was Afraid of the Girls.

St. Mary's, Nov. 30.—The best bear story of the season comes from Paulding county. A few days ago two of Emerald township's popular young ladies, who, by the way, are familiar with the use of firearms, were passing along a by-road that is not traveled much, when unexpectedly they met a bear, which a few years ago were quite plentiful in that section. Old bruin immediately set himself upon his haunches ready for an encounter.

Instead of attempting to escape, the girls, having often heard of the hugging qualities of a bear, made up their minds to draw straws to see who would get the first hug. During the settlement of this question bruin "tumbled to the racket" and betook himself up a near-by tree for safety. Of course the girls would not climb a tree, so one watched while the other went to the nearest house after a gun, and a few minutes after her return the bear lay upon the ground dead, and the young ladies proceeded upon their journey.

BURNED TO DEATH.

Frightful Accident to an Aged Lady in Mansfield.

Mansfield, Nov. 30.—Elizabeth Hall, the aged mother of Dr. H. L. Hall of this city, met a terrible death Sunday. While she was near the kitchen stove her clothing caught fire, but she was unconscious of the act until the flames had completely enveloped her.

Her son heard her calls and hastened to her assistance, but the flames had already done their work, and before he could extinguish them, during which time he himself was badly burned, she had sustained fatal injury, the flesh fairly falling from her body.

She would have been 89 years old next February.

SHUT OFF THEIR GAS.

Tiffin Manufacturers in the Same Boat With Those in Toledo.

Tiffin, O., Nov. 30.—(Special)—The complications arising from the recent action of the city gas trustees in advancing the price of fuel gas to manufacturers to 6 cents per thousand feet by the meter came to head Saturday.

Three of the largest factories in the city were cut off and forced to shut down on account of non-payment of their accrued gas bills.

Two of them promptly paid up, but the Tiffin Electric Light company, of which ex-Congressman Seney is president, refused to pay the advance, and the courts will probably decide the matter.

TURN ON THE GAS.

There's a Heap of Cold Weather in the West.

Galena, Ill., Nov. 30.—A cold snap struck this vicinity yesterday freezing the Mississippi river at this place solidly from shore to shore. The glass registered 15 degrees below zero.

GAMBLERS SUED.

Findlay, Nov. 30.—Some time ago Mrs. Charlotte Carlin, the wife of a prominent business man of this city, began suit against Clifford & Gassman for the recovery of $15,000, which she alleges her husband had lost in their gambling establishment. Saturday her attorney filed papers in the common pleas court in another suit against the same parties in which she seeks to recover $10,000 lost by her husband, presumably since the first suit was started.

CREATING COMMENT.

Paris, Nov. 30.—The archbishop of Aix's conduct since the trial, is said to have been severely commented upon by M. Ribot, that minister laying particular stress upon the fact that the archbishop had referred to his trial, yesterday, in his address after celebrating mass in the Basilica at Lyons, saying he did not regret what he had done and that the fine imposed upon him would not have the effect of silencing him.

RICHARD POWER DEAD.

London, Nov. 30.—The death of Mr. Richard Power, member of parliament for Waterford City, and well known as the "whip" of the Parnellite party, which occurred yesterday, has been a great shock not only to the Irish parliamentary party, but also to politicians in general.

TWO FREIGHTS COLLIDE.

Hartford, Conn., Nov. 30.—A collision between two freight trains on the New England road took place this morning at Newington Junction. Conductor John Frazer, Engineer Lamerоux, Fireman James Warehouse and Brakeman Geo. Chubb were all seriously injured. Fireman Lameroux had both legs cut off. He is not expected to live.

DAMAGED BY WATER.

Ft. Wayne, Ind., Nov. 30.—When the wholesale grocery of Bursley & Co. was closed Saturday evening the water on the fourth floor was left running. It ran all night, flooding the building and doing much damage to teas, coffee and tobacco.

MAVERICK BANK OPEN

Boston, Nov. 30.—The doors of the Maverick National bank are open this morning and the bookkeepers are delivering receivers' certificates to depositors who have proved their claims. One hundred and sixty certificates covering the first proved claims have been signed and nearly all issued.

FISHERIES QUESTIONS.

Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 30.—It is evident the dominion government does not look for an early settlement of the Atlantic fisheries question. The minister of marine has advertised for suitable vessels for the fishery protection service against American fishermen found poaching during the fishing season beginning June 1.

NO TACKS IN HIS HEAD.

Vienna, Nov. 30.—A horrible attempt to commit suicide occurred here to-day. A septuagenarian suffering from religious mania, secured seven nails, each three inches long, and hammered them into his head. The old man had the idea that he was called upon to make a sacrifice of himself.

NOT IN IT WITH LONDON.

Boston, Nov. 30.—Lady Balgarnie, who has been doing the slums of Boston, says they are not so bad as those of London and that there is an entire absence of that expression of utter hopelessness which characterizes the London outcast.

COLD IN THE EAST.

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 30.—River and canal navigation is uninterrupted by ice as yet, but if the cold wave continues for 48 hours both will have a barrier placed upon them. The greatest concern is felt because of the great amount of grain along the Erie canal and Hudson river.

CONVERTED TO ROMANISM.

Boston, Nov. 30.—Rev. James Field Spaulding, for 25 years rector of Christ church, Cambridge, who resigned a fortnight ago, yesterday announced to his parishioners that he had become a convert to Romanism.

WILL VOTE FOR CRISP.

Concord, N. H., Nov. 30.—Congressman Daniell has expressed an intention to vote for Crisp for speaker in the coming contest for the speakership.

ELEVATOR BURNED.

Escanaba, Nov. 30.—Fire destroyed an elevator and $150,000 bushels of wheat here Sunday. Loss, $250,000.

FINDLAY'S BELT LINE BEGUN.

Findlay, Nov. 30.—The ties for the Findlay belt line railroad have arrived and are being distributed along the grade. The iron has been ordered from St. Louis and is expected over the Big Four almost any day. The point for commencing iron laying will be at the Wetherald rolling mill, from which place it will proceed north and west. This important enterprise is a sure go and will add greatly to the railroad facilities of the city.

HAYNES EXPRESSES HIMSELF.

Washington, Nov. 30.—Congressman Haynes, of Fremont, spoke his mind on the speakership to-day. Said he: "It seems to me that Mr. Crisp represents more nearly than Mr. Mills the principles of the democrats of Ohio, who, as a rule, are not free traders. Crisp is in favor of tariff reform, but Mills stands for the ultra and extreme idea of non-protection, if not absolute free trade. I am satisfied that this will not suit Ohio, and if we make Mills speaker I am afraid it will play the deuce with us. That is about the size of it from my point of view."

HEALTHY. HAPPY. WHY?

Is he a bright child? Does he look healthy and happy? He is bright, and he is both healthy and happy. He is the little son of Mrs. Henry T. Bowers, wife of the well-known contractor and builder, who resides in Dorchester avenue, South Boston. Mrs. Bowers has had quite an experience with her children, which experience we give in her own words, as follows:

"I have a little boy two and one-half years of age, the perfect picture of rugged health, and also a little girl of four. I attribute their good health and good temper to the use of Dr. Hand's Remedies.

I have used, as occasion required, the entire line, and have had very marked results from the Celic Cure, Cough and Croup Medicine, and the Pleasant Physic. I have never had any but good result from the use of any of them."

No mother would make a statement like the above unless she knew wholly whereof she affirmed.

A little book, illustrated, full of sense and suggestion, will be sent to any one in the land, FREE.

THE QUACK.

We have all heard of Dr. Bigelow
Whom dentists call a quack
And wonder why so many
Follow in his track.

They say it's wrong to advertise,
And boast of work and skill,
But when their patients leave them
They take the bitter pill.

One after the other
Have followed Dr. B.,
Until in most every paper
Their ads you plainly see.

Two years ago the paper men
Could not secure an ad
And if they dared to ask it
The dentist would get mad.

Dr. Bigelow's success
Made all the dentists think
Now most a dozen of the lot
Are using printer's ink.

Drs. T. & C. were the first
To make a start, then Dr. M.
With B. & C. dropped in
To take a part.

Now Drs. H. & A. are Talking of Veneer, so
We prophesy—still more
Quacks before another year.

Dr. Bigelow's a clever man,
And keeps things well in hand,
So no matter who may advertise,
He'll be first in demand.

Everybody sings his praises
For a hundred miles around.
They say his head is level,
And his methods all are sound.

The doctor is not lazy,
And was never known to shirk;
But does with his own hands,
Both hard and skilful work.

His helpers are all busy,
And you find it's quite a sight
To visit his apartments
Either in the day or night.

The day help work from seven
Until the hour of six,
And then the night force keeps things moving
And put in their best licks.

So now, my friends, remember
My verses and my rhyme,
And go to Doctor Bigelow's
Without regard to time.

SUPT. LAKE'S THANKS.

To the Editor: The workers at the "Home Mission Sunday School" desire to express through your columns their gratitude to the several friends who so liberally aided them in furnishing the Thanksgiving dinner for the Mission, and to the Westminster, First Presbyterian and First Baptist churches for the offering made at their Union Thanksgiving service in aid of their work.

Lastly and wholly unexpected was a most liberal offering from the First Congregational church on Sunday.

Language is inadequate to express the appreciation and gratitude of the workers at the Home Mission Sunday school.

L. B. LAKE, Supt.
